GOVERNOR ATTACKS RAILROAD

Governor Foss this afternoon in the first speech of his campaign practically accused the New Haven Railroad of bribing a member of the Legislature.

The Governor charged the New Haven road with paying over money to a member of the Legislative committee which investigated the Western trolley question. The Governor demanded a searching investigation to learn "how much further the corrupting influence of the railroad extended."

In the speech, which was made before the State Board of Trade at Norwood, the Governor said:

The attempt of the former management of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad to control the policies of this State so far succeeded as to lead last Spring to the passage by the Legislature of the so-called Berkshire trolley bill.

It was well known last Spring that the railroad lobby was active and well financed, but we have only recently learned what large sums of money the railroad was expending for political purposes. I have called this matter to the attention of the Public Service Commission, and that body has agreed to make a searching investigation.

We know now, however, that leaders of both the great political parties, including at least one member of a legislative committee then investigating the Berkshire trolley question, received money from the New Haven road.

Protests Evelyn's Appearance Here

Roxbury Against It. Jeweler Tells Mayor.

Michael H. Burke, a Roxbury jeweler, made an emphatic protest to Mayor Fitzgerald today against Evelyn Thaw being allowed to appear on the stage in Boston next week.

Evelyn is billed for a two weeks' stay. Mayor Fitzgerald will take the matter under advisement.

Jeweler Burke claimed that not only the two organizations that he represents object to the appearance of Evelyn, but that Roxbury sentiment in general is against her appearance.

"If everything," said Mr. Burke "was to go free and easy in theatricals, we wouldn't object to Evelyn. But with the lid being put down, and in the interest of good morals, it ought to be put down tight on Evelyn."

Two Drown When Dory Overturns

Men from Barge Trying to Get Ashore Off Highland Light.

Two men were drowned at noon today when they attempted to leave the barge Oakland, off Highland Light, in a small dory, according to a dispatch received this afternoon.

The dory capsized and the men went under before the life savers from Atkinson's Hollow station could launch a boat. The barges Oakland and Sumner K. Mead, in tow of the tug Paul, were caught in yesterday's gale.

The Mead sprung aleak and struck on the beach at Monomoy Point. The Oakland anchored and rode out the storm. For some reason unknown the two men left the barge and made the unsuccessful attempt to reach shore.

Report 4 Captains for Port Violations

Captain Hird, harbor master, claims that many schooners anchored directly in the channel without proper lights or lookouts during the recent fogs and today he gave Collector Curtis the names of four masters who, he says, violated the harbor rules. They are: Captains Wilbur Cowen of the schooner C. T. W. Carl Merriam of the Annie Lord; D. N. Greenleaf of the Charles Carlisle, and Emery Strout of the schooner Charles L. Jeffrey. Mr. Curtis is to refer the matter to the authorities at Washington.

Aviator's Wife Still Hopes; Search Vain

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Albert J. Jewell, the aviator, missing two days in his airship while competing in a race around Manhattan, is believed to have lost himself above the Atlantic in a fog and to have drowned when his craft fell at the giving out of the fuel supply.

His wife, however, clings to the hope he may have been picked up by some passing craft. It was Jewell's first great venture into the air.

After Golf Taft Pays Crane Visit

NORFOLK, Ct., Oct. 15.—Former President William H. Taft arrived here today to play a golf foursome with C. D. Hills, his former secretary, George B. Case and J. B. Mahon, Summer residents. He is the guest of Dr. F. S. Dennis, and late today will motor to Dalton, Mass., to visit ex-Senator W. Murray Crane.

MYSTERY TRIO CALLS ON THAW

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 15.—A legal fight for the reward offered for the capture of Harry Thaw has been begun.

Deputy Sheriff Burleigh Kelsea of Colebrooke and Constable Boudreau of Cootticooke are the claimants. A reward of $500 was offered by Dr. Raymond Kleb of the Matteawan Asylum immediately after Thaw's escape, for "information leading to his apprehension."

Deputy Kelsea recognized Thaw and arranged for Boudreau to arrest him. The two men agreed, it is claimed, that Boudreau should receive $100 and Kelsea $400 of the reward.

But both applied for the entire amount, immediately after Thaw's capture. Not a cent has yet been paid. Kelsea has now put the matter in the hands of Attorney Bernard L. Jacobs, a Jerome assistant, for collection of the reward.

Complications are threatened in New York over the matter. For the State offers a $50 reward for the arrest of insane fugitives. The taxpayers are expected to object if Dr. Kleb pays $500 more of the State's money, and it is expected that if the reward is paid, they will insist that it be paid by Kleb himself.

Another startling development came to the case today. Three strangers were closeted with Thaw for hours, yesterday and today it was stated that they were members of the Dutchess County Grand Jury which indicted or did not indict—according to whether Jerome or Thaw is correct in his statements—the Matteawan fugitive.

The men came to Concord unnoticed, it is said, and paid their own expenses. They came to tell the real story of the Grand Jury session.

Hawthorne Free in Prison-Made Suit

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 15.—When Julian Hawthorne awoke today and prepared for his release from the Federal prison, after serving a sentence for fraudulent use of the mails, he cast aside the shabby gray suit he had worn and donned one of prison make. Hawthorne is considerably stouter than when he entered the prison.

With Dr. W. F. Morton, convicted with him and serving a like sentence, Hawthorne hoped to leave by the first train for New York.

"5 Per Cent. Clause to Stay"—Underwood

"Will Remain," He Says, "Even at Trade War Risk."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—"The 5 per cent. clause benefiting American shipping will stand in the new tariff act even at the risk of trade wars and other commercial complications," declared Representative Underwood after a visit to the White House today.

The fact that a number of trade treaties probably will be abrogated by the clause does not worry Mr. Underwood. He thinks that the United States is well able to care for itself should European nations attempt commercial reprisals.

Bail Motorist Who Killed Lowell Girl

Avery A. Thrasher, of Melrose, who, while driving his automobile yesterday, ran down and killed little Ellen Teague at the corner of High and Chestnut streets, Lowell, appeared in the Lowell police court today, charged with manslaughter. Thrasher pleaded not guilty and furnished $1,000 for his appearance Oct. 28. Mr. Thrasher was on his way home from his Summer camp at Brattleboro, Vermont, when the accident occurred.

Senator Lodge Able to Walk

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was able to walk for the first time today after the serious operation for gastric ulcer which he underwent a short time ago. He dressed and walked from his room in his Nahant home unassisted, but was not permitted to leave the house. Dr. Frederick Winslow and Dr. Francis Harrington are still attending him.

Kills Self Because Children Left Him

CLINTON, Oct. 15.—Herman Frank Kanis, sixty-five of No. 202 Chace street, killed himself today by shooting himself in the right temple with a revolver. Medical Examiner George L. Tobey declared it suicide on account of despondency. Kanis had complained that all his five children had, one after the other, left home. Otto, the youngest, recently went to Worcester.

Rebukes Militant Jailed for Arson

CAMBRIDGE, Eng., Oct. 15.—A stern rebuke accompanied a sentence of eighteen months when Miriam Pratt, a suffragette convicted of arson, was arraigned in court today. The judge declared that she and her kind would ruin England if allowed to vote.

WIDOW HEARS POISON INDICTMENT READ

Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, sitting in the Plymouth courtroom and facing the jury which is to decide her fate, today heard herself accused of "willfully, feloniously and with malice aforethought" slaying her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton.

This ordeal for the accused widow lasted thirteen long minutes—the time it took Clerk Hoban to read the indictment against her, charging her with the death of her husband. Mrs. Eaton seemed extremely nervous while the clerk read—a striking contrast to the Mrs. Eaton of a few minutes before.

SANGUINE WITH NEW COMPOSURE.

Just before the indictment was read, ushered into the public court room. As the court clerk read through the first counts of the indictment it seemed as though she could not keep back the tears. When the clerk read the words she deliberately kill and murder she said "I am not guilty," she felt her lips.

Moves Continually.

The widow seemed at first out of place in her upholstered arm chair. Then she began to read, she seemed to be trying to read, she seemed to be trying to read, she seemed to be trying

WIFE THREATENED BLAKE—MRS. MACKAY

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 15.—Mrs. Katherine A. Mackay's answer to the suit for $1,000,000 for alienation of affections, brought by Mrs. Joseph A. Blake, was filed in New York today by Attorney Arthur Train, representing Mrs. Mackay. It was all the same line made public here by Colonel Frederick Hale, her Portland counsel.

Mrs. Blake charged that Mrs. Mackay had won her husband, the eminent surgeon, away from her.

Mrs. Mackay in her answer declares that the Blake's had been estranged since 1904, while she did not meet Dr. Blake till 1909.

She charges that Mrs. Blake threatened to kill Dr. Blake. She declares that Mrs. Blake circulated slanderous statements against her husband in a deliberate effort to ruin his practice. She says that Mrs. Blake repeatedly told people that she "despised and hated" Dr. Blake. In the answer Mrs. Mackay says in part:

Mrs. Mackay denies every allegation in the complaint, and for a further and partial defence to the complaint, and in mitigation of damages, alleges:

That she, Mrs. Mackay, did not become acquainted with Dr. Blake until about the year 1909, that Mrs. Blake always has been of a jealous disposition and ungovernable temper; that since 1895, Mrs. Blake has had no affection or love for Dr. Blake; but on the contrary has sought to injure his good name by constantly spreading among his patients, friends and relatives false and unjust rumors and accusations against him, regarding his intimacy with other women and his neglect of his marital obligations, and has constantly declared to these persons that she—Mrs. Blake—despised and hated her husband, and desired to ruin him; and that during the year 1905, and repeatedly since, she threatened to kill Dr. Blake.

That by reason of these facts Mrs. Blake is estranged from her husband, and has been, and has utterly destroyed whatever affection or love he may have had for her.

And further, that by reason of these facts Dr. Blake has not lived with Mrs. Blake as his wife since 1904, long prior to the time when it first knew the defendant, Mrs. Mackay; but on the contrary, he has avoided the plaintiff, Mrs. Blake and by natural reserve she and he have since 1904 lived separately, and have since the autumn of 1910 have maintained separate establishments.

Foss Fails to Name New License Man

Land Commission Berth Also Remains Unfilled.

Governor Foss today sent to the Executive Council the following nominations:

Fred E. Jones, of Quincy, for medical examiner of Norfolk County; W. Edward Palmer, of Northbridge, for associate medical examiner for Worcester County; Emery B. Gibbs, of Brookline, for public administrator of Norfolk County; Thomas H. Kirkland, of Springfield, for master in chancery for Hampden County.

The Council confirmed the Governor's appointments made last week, including that of Miss Maud Gillespie for the Mailmon Wage Commission. The Governor again failed to send to any appointments to the vacancies that exist on the Boston Licensing Board and the State Harbor and Land Commission.

Hub Needs 3 Steam Lines to Panama

"If Boston is to get her share of the new Pan American trade and take proper advantage of the Panama Canal, she should have three new steamship lines, provided with up-to-date freight and passenger carrying vessels," declared John Barrett, director-general of the Pan American Union, at the meeting of the Boston Credit Men's Associations, in Young's Hotel. He continued:

"One of the lines should ply between Boston and principal ports of eastern South America, where the trade with the United States is developing today even faster than the trade with Europe. Another line should run from Boston through the Panama Canal and South along the west coast of South America. A third line should also run through the canal and then north along the west coast of Central America.

Police Convention Opens in Cambridge

The annual convention of the Massachusetts Police Association and the Massachusetts Mutual Association was opened today in Quincy Hall, Cambridgeport, with 128 members from all over the State present.

Mayor Barry greeted the delegates. Sightseeing trips, banquets, and many other pleasures have been planned for the bluecoats while here.

Women Should Read Miss Morgan on Eaton Drama

Every woman in New England should read Angela Morgan's special studies of Mrs. Jennie May Eaton and of the great drama being staged in the courthouse at Plymouth. Miss Morgan is not only one of the ablest newspaper writers in the country, but is famous both as author and poetess.

Her special articles, which are to be found in the AMERICAN every day, are absorbing, are written with a woman's keen perception of another woman's fight for her life and possess the humaneness, the interest and vivid description which make the articles the big features of the news of the Eaton case. Every woman will want to read these articles by Miss Morgan.

FOSS STARTS TO 'PUT LIFE IN CAMPAIGN'

Governor Foss reached Boston today and opened his campaign for Governor. "I'm going to put some life in this fight," he declared.

The Governor explained that he felt he just had to run, for citizens from all over the State were urging him. He said these calls came largely from Republicans of standing, who promised him a heavy Republican vote.

"I should imagine that Walsh has been having a little the best of it so far, from all I hear," he declared. "But it has been a dead campaign. I felt I couldn't resist the call to get in the game."

The Governor went direct to the State House and had an hour's conference with Frederick Macleod, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission.

Mr. Foss declared the commission had done wrong to allow the New Haven road's petition to be allowed to issue $67,500,000 in debenture bonds. After the conference Macleod declared that he was "with Foss" and that the Governor had good enough Democrat for me. I'll vote for him."

At noon the Governor, in his old checkered campaign overcoat that has become famous as carrying the Foss boom started by auto with George M. Harlow for Norwood where, addressing the State Board of Trade, he will open his campaign.

"We're off, boys," he said to the Board of Trade, he will open his campaign

Congressman Gardner issued this statement on the Foss candidacy:

"I am not surprised at Governor Foss' determination to run. A day or two ago a business friend of mine told me that the Governor would run. The prophecy has come true.

Order Inquiry Into Beverly Park Funds

A searching investigation to find out why the Beverly Park Commission exceeded its appropriation and spent an additional $560 was begun today by the Beverly Finance Committee. The investigation was ordered by the Beverly Board of Aldermen following the receipt of a communication from Mayor MacDonald regarding the financial standing of the park department.

Aunt Sally's Advice to Beauty-Seekers

W. C. D. says: "My face is freckled the year round; nothing I try seems to help much. Is there anything that will really take off these horrid spots?" Have you tried the treatment recommended by Minnie L.? I've known this to remove very obstinate freckles. Miss B. asks: "What should I do for deep lines under my eyes and across my forehead?" Such lines, and all wrinkles, are best obliterated by bathing affected portions in a good astringent and tonic lotion, which strengthens and draws in the relaxed tissue. Here's a reliable formula: 1 oz. powdered saxolite, (a pt. witch hazel; mix and use daily until entirely relieved.

Minnie L.: The golden redness as well as the pimples may easily be removed by the ordinary mercolized wax. Apply nightly like cold cream and erase mornings with warm water. Soon you'll have a beautifully white, clear, soft and velvety complexion. Mercolized wax, sold by all druggists, is better than cosmetics for any complexion trouble. One ounce suffices for most conditions.—Woman's Realm.—Adv.

$750,000 GIFTS SHOWERED ON ROYAL BRIDE

LONDON, Oct. 15.—One lone suffragette, who attempted to carry out the militants' threat to break up the nuptials of Princess Alexandra, Duchess of Fife, to Prince Arthur, Duke of Connaught, caused a riot just before the wedding today when she attempted to throw a bundle of suffrage literature into a carriage containing King George and Queen Mary.

The suffragette rang to the door of the royal carriage, screaming: "Give us votes for women." Immediately she was seized, but so sturdy was her grip that it required three men to drag her away from the carriage. The driver whipped up his horses and the carriage did not stop.

When the crowd learned what the woman had done a rush was made for her. It looked for a time as though she would be seriously injured. Her dress was nearly torn off, her hair was unloosened and fell about her shoulders and she lost her hat.

Fighting, screaming and kicking she was dragged off to the police station, where a hearing was following.

The chapel was a bower of flowers. Palms, roses and lilies hid the walls and surrounded the altar. The scene was unfolded in all its splendor.

King George gave away the bride. After the benediction the bridal party adjourned to the throne room where a reception was held. The register was signed by the bride's mother, the witnesses being King George, Queen Mary, the Duke of Connaught and several other members of the royal family.

Second Suffragette Attack.

After the ceremony when the party was leaving the palace suffragettes made an attempt to hold up the carriage containing Queen Mother Alexandra and Queen Maud of Norway.

The women dashed into the street and bombarded the carriage with suffragette literature, meantime keeping up the cry of "Votes for Women." The crowds showed deep resentment at this second attack.

A mob charged upon the woman and a general fight followed. On account of the numerous policemen on duty the disturbances were soon quelled and the women were rescued from violence and put in jail. Redoubled precautions were taken to guard the royal personages from militants. Troopers cantered alongside of the king's carriage and the number of plain clothes detectives was increased.

Sylvia Pankhurst, daughter of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who was arrested last night, had planned to lead an army of "dare devils" among the suffragettes into St. James Palace if possible, but her arrest frustrated her plans.

The wedding, the first royal one in England since 1905, when Princess Margaret of Connaught became the bride of the Crown Prince of Sweden, was gorgeous in every respect.

Gifts Worth $750,000.

It was performed at noon in the Chapel Royal of St. James Palace in the presence of two reigning monarchs, King George of England and King Haakon of Norway. Many other notables, including members of royal families, diplomats and officers of state, were also present.

On account of the militants' threat a solid line of police and soldiers was thrown about the palace and along the main approaches.

The gifts were magnificent, being worth nearly $750,000. The bride's trousseau contains fifty-five gowns.

The weather was fair. Enormous crowds began gathering in the streets near the palace long before the hour set for the wedding, hoping to get a glimpse of the noble pair and the notable persons attending. All the buildings in the vicinity were decorated with flags. Many persons in the crowd were miniature Union Jacks.

Shortly before noon the guests began arriving in force. Among the early arrivals was Queen Mother Alexandra. Premier Asquith, attended by a bodyguard to prevent a personal attack by suffragettes, came soon afterward.

In the meantime members of the cabinet and the foreign ambassadors were arriving in carriages and automobiles.

King George and Queen Mary were carried in a state carriage from Buckingham palace. Immediately upon their arrival they were met by King Haakon of Norway, the Queen of Norway, the Prince of Wales, Prince Leopold of Battenburg, Prince Andrew of Greece and others.

When the bride arrived, she was accompanied by her mother, the Princess Royal. Her wedding gown was of white charmeuse draped with tulle and richly embroidered with pearls. The train was composed of the same charmeuse hanging from the shoulders and draped with beautiful old brussels applique lace. A brussels lace veil matched the gown.

STATE TO PAY $4,000 TO GET EILLS BACK

Mrs. Harriet Cox Ellis of Revere today won a big victory when the Governor's Council voted that the State should pay the expense of a State messenger to go to Japan to secure Mrs. Ellis' daughter, Olga, and bring back Mr. Ellis, whose extradition has been demanded by Hampden County on a perjury charge.

Olga Ellis was kidnaped by her father from Boston on Washington's Birthday and taken to Japan, where he was arrested about a week ago.

State Police Officer Fred Flynn has been selected as the messenger.

No definite sum has been fixed, but it was said by Attorney Roger Sherman Hoar that the cost would be about $4,000.

Mrs. Ellis said:

"I would have started for Japan and little Olga today had I possessed the means. It has cost me nearly all I had to race her to the last eight months. I want to thank the newspapers and hundreds of friends all over the world who have lent their kind assistance in this trying search for my child."

Mellen Trial Over Wreck in February

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Oct. 15.—State's Attorney Judson announces that the manslaughter trials of former President Mellen of the New Haven railroad and ex-Vice-President Mellenry in connection with the fatal Westport wreck, more than a year ago, will begin at the February term of court.

MOTHER DENIES REVERE VICTIM WAS SUICIDE

Mrs. Thomas H. Reardon of No. 45 Forest street, Peabody, mother of Mrs. Gladys Brooks of No. 65 Delton street, Revere, whose mysterious death the police are investigating, today declared that her daughter was not a suicide. She said:

She did not kill herself.

She and Walter (Walter Brooks, the dead girl's husband) were here two weeks ago. They were happy as could be.

We used to live in North Easton. Gladys was born in Everham, N. H., April 30, 1892. I cannot account for her death.

Walter and Gladys were married in Rhode Island two years ago. They met in Revere. I always liked Walter. He's a splendid young fellow.

Brooks is an ironworker, and is strangely missing. The police wish to question him, but no charge has been laid against him.

Mrs. Brooks was found dead in her home. An autopsy will be performed.

Coakley Must Use Stickers

The name of Timothy W. Coakley will not appear on the official ballot as a candidate for district attorney against Joseph C. Pelletier, the present incumbent. The Boston Election Commissioners have failed to find a sufficient number of signatures of actual voters whom they could certify on his papers. In consequence of this action Mr. Coakley has been filed with the Secretary of State. Mr. Coakley will have to go on the ballot by stickers. No independent nomination papers were filed for Colonel Everett C. Benton for Governor.

Aigrettes Are Torn Off This Girl's Hat

First Seizure Under Tariff Law Made in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Miss Alice M. Shaffer of Schenectady is the first woman to be compelled to remove aigrettes from her hat at the request of customs officials.

She arrived on the steamer Antilla from Mexico. A large bunch of aigrettes on her hat caught the eye of an Inspector. He informed Miss Shaffer of the provision in the new tariff law. Although she was slightly pleased, Miss Shaffer removed the offending aigrettes, for which she paid $6. The government then sent them to public stores for destruction.

EUROPE MAY BLOCK NEW HUERTA COUP

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—For the purpose of protesting against the dissolution of the Mexican Congress and the dictatorship assumed by Provisional President Huerta, the Spanish Minister at Mexico City called a conference of all foreign representatives in the Mexican capital today, according to dispatches.

Relations between the United States and Mexico are desperately strained. There is greater anxiety in the Administration than at any time since the arrival of John Lind in Mexico. A positive rupture appears unavoidable.

President Wilson, in a second note to President Huerta, notified the Mexican government that any new administration set up as a result of the elections October 26 will not be recognized by the United States government.

From Mexico city it was learned that the Huerta Cabinet has pronounced the note as "intemperate" and is sending a reply immediately. It is indicated that the Huerta Cabinet has decided on a most defiant reply to the American note.

EVELYN'S DRAMATIC LOVE STORY

CHAPTER XLV.

"And witnesses were called from a distance."—Lee Stories.

The dragnet cast out by the District Attorney's office spread far and wide to bring in all possible witnesses. One chorus girl, playing in Boston, even hurried over to New York on her precious Sunday, in response to a call from Assistant District Attorney Garvan.

This actress was a vivacious blonde named Edna McClure, who was to become a very much wrought-up young lady in the next few days.

Miss McClure was a member of the chorus of "The Tourists," which was filling an engagement at a Boston playhouse. She was the daughter of Mrs. LeGrand Minck, who was boarding on West Forty-second street, New York city.

Mr. Garvan questioned Mrs. LeGrand Minck about any knowledge she might have of Thaw's enmity for White. Mrs. LeGrand Minck was quoted as saying:

I came to know Thaw during the Winter of 1903. He had been introduced to my daughter and I watched him very closely because he acted so recklessly at that time. I did not care for Edna to have much to do with him.

Thaw always seemed to me to be out of his head. His elbows had a habit of jerking a great deal unfortunately and his eyes were always wild.

Called White "a Monster."

He often talked to me about Stanford White, and, when he did, his eyes seemed wilder than ever. He was possessed of the most deadly hatred of White. It was like a mania with him.

One time Thaw said to me: "Do you believe in God? If you do, you must protect your daughter from this blackguard White. That man is a monster. He has done his best against Evelyn and he will do his best against your daughter if you are not careful."

Learning that Mrs. LeGrand Minck's daughter had been in the same theatrical companies that Evelyn had played in when she was intimate with White, Mr. Garvan sent to Miss McClure to run over from Boston to New York and tell him anything she knew which would illuminate the case. He had also questioned Mazie Follette, another chorus girl of the same estate.

Miss McClure obeyed quickly. She received plenty of publicity from her trip, and evidently more than she bargained for.

She arrived at the District Attorney's offices at 2:30 that Sunday afternoon, and was questioned for over two hours. Her mother was with her.

Miss McClure returned to Boston. The next morning she found that the New York papers had long stories of her talk with Mr. Garvan, with a wealth of detail. She was even quoted as having told Mr. Garvan that at one time Harry Thaw had drawn a revolver, flourished it around his head and said: "This is for White."

"A Lie—All a Lie."

As this was two years before the murder the threat, if made by Thaw, would indicate a long standing grievance and would rob the defence of the protection of "emotional insanity."

She was also quoted as saying that Stanford White was a much-maligned man, that Evelyn Nesbit was ungrateful and that White had been paying the bills of Howard Nesbit, Evelyn's brother, even after she married Thaw.

The tenor of the statements attributed to Miss McClure was distinctly hostile to Thaw and Evelyn. City editors of Boston newspapers sent reporters to the theatre to see Miss McClure and to ask her if she had said all that she was alleged to have said to Mr. Garvan.

The reporters found an extremely pretty and equally wrathful girl at the stage entrance. She scanned the New York statements, then burst out:

"It's a lie—all a lie."

The company manager came out and ordered the girl to her dressing room. She started, stopped, came back, denied the statements again and then went on her way to get ready for the performance. The next morning one of the New York papers published a statement by Miss McClure, as follows:

Mr. Garvan, I am sure, if he chooses to break silence, will agree that my acquaintance with Mr. Thaw and Stanford White yields nothing that will have the remotest bearing upon the forthcoming trial, and that our conversation on Sunday proves this.

Word that, following his talk with Miss Mazie Follette, Mr. Garvan wished to discuss with her the affairs of the two men, reached me in Boston late on Saturday, and I hurried to New York. My mother accompanied me to the District Attorney's office, but my interview with Mr. Garvan was held solely between us two. He questioned me at great length and I answered freely and truthfully.

The "McClure Episode."

I told him that personally I knew naught of the feeling of the one toward the other; that I had heard no threat; that there was no reason, or a remote possibility of my having been the confidante of either man; that I knew both, but in the superficial way that dozens of my company at the theatre did; that neither had ever said or done anything to destroy my feelings of cordial regard and good comradeship, and that my only knowledge of the alleged flourishing of a revolver by Mr. Thaw, accompanied by threats, was obtained from the newspapers.

Which closed the "Episode McClure" for the time being.

* * *

In the first week of July Dr. Allen McLane Hamilton, the alienist, retained by the defence, made three examinations of Harry in his cell.

Some strategy was required to get Harry to submit to any kind of test as to his mental soundness. He had abruptly refused to be examined by alienists for the State right after the murder, though Judge Olcott advised him that he might be injuring his own case by his refusal.

On July 7 Judge Olcott left New York hurriedly for Philadelphia. There was much mystery about his purpose.

The reporters began to suspect that something was afoot to "break"—as the expression goes—in the insanity line.

Late the same day Terence J. McManus of Judge Olcott's staff made this statement:

The result of Dr. Hamilton's examination was very satisfactory to us. I might say that we were overjoyed at what it showed. You cannot get it too strongly.

Evidence of Insanity.

This statement was regarded as pretty good indication that Dr. Hamilton had found evidences of insanity in Harry, evidences enough to take before a jury. Hence the satisfaction of Harry's counsel, notwithstanding Harry's own opinion in the matter.

The following Monday it was learned that Judge Olcott's mysterious mission to Philadelphia was to visit the Friends' Asylum for the Insane at Frankford.

One of the patients there was Miss Harriett Thaw, cousin to Harry. She was the Thaw relative who was found living in seclusion in Philadelphia two years ago and who was committed to the asylum, as previously mentioned in this narrative.

WAS EVELYN WORTH SAVING? WHAT SOME READERS THINK

Was Evelyn Nesbit Thaw worth saving?

"She was," is the emphatic answer given by thousands of readers. Here are some more letters expressing the opinions of readers:

"No Place for Evelyn."

A controversy like this offers women an opportunity to express their opinions on a topic very vital to American life. Since the days of the Puritans we American women have set high standards for women. Owing to this, the standard has benefited more than one can tell in a short letter. Women of this country realize that in order to maintain a place in society they must conform to the rules laid down two hundred years ago. Evelyn Thaw is one of those women who have violated those rules. She must know and does that her sex will not tolerate such flagrant misuse of womanly rights. Gertrude Atherton said that Evelyn was not worth saving.

I believe that the novelist considered as I do that American women, knowing what they do about Evelyn, would agree with her that she was not worth saving. Remember that Evelyn has not given any proof that she desires to be saved. And don't forget the real issue—even if she did desire to be saved—there would be no place for her.

MRS. SUSAN BAKER.

"Evelyn a Good Mother."

How easy to condemn. How easy to criticise. One can detect the errors in the conduct of another long before their own. This has been true for centuries. I suppose it will always remain so. Evelyn Thaw wronged nobody. She was the loser. She was even womanly when Harry Thaw asked her to marry him. She was honest and revealed her past. What more could be expected from her? She is now an older woman. Must she always be held up to scorn?

How much better if these women who are talking about society ethics would apply some of the natural rules of civilization and extend a helping hand to this unfortunate woman. She is worth just as much as any women alive. She has everything to live for and I am sure she will not be disappointed if she fails to have entre to the exclusive drawing rooms.

What is greater than motherhood? She is now a mother and a good mother. That is more than some of the women can boast of, who are pulling her down. MISS ALICE M.

Says Evelyn Saved Thaw.

Why all this talk about Evelyn Thaw? It makes my blood boil to read the letters about her. I firmly believe her story saved Thaw from the electric chair. A story against herself to save him. But Thaw then condemned her and refused to give her support.

Stanford White was to blame. I say Evelyn Thaw is worth hundreds who are walking the streets today for she is earning her own living and that of her child. The women who are criticising Evelyn Thaw should form a club to save girls from men like Stanford White. Evelyn Thaw has my sympathy and best wishes.

W. E. L.

She Is Worth Saving.

Before Thaw's escape from the madhouse I had heard much of Evelyn and imagined a great deal more. But now, like the Queen of Sheba, I must testify: "Behold the half was not told me." Since then I have learned into what temptation she was lured, and if she did sin, anybody with the least heart, after learning what she has been through, and knowing the terrible grilling she underwent at the trial, could not help from saying, with good reason and sane judgment, that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw is worth saving.

LEON FAUCHER.

Is Different Than Others.

How strange it seems that any question should be raised about the worth of a human soul as in the case of Evelyn. I cannot agree that there is any limit that can be reached where she is beyond redemption. I believe that her case is in no way different than thousands of others that it has been our good fortune not to hear of.

Speaking as a father, who has the welfare of his own daughter at heart, I can only offer the deep-felt sympathy of one who would have a broken heart if that one whom he loves should pass through such an experience.

Those who have loved ones should stop before condemning and ask themselves if, there will be no need that they would not go to it Evelyn had been of their own flesh and blood.

It is a good thing for many of us that our lives are not as an open book to be read by passers-by, because I am certain that among those who are ready to refuse forgiveness there are some who need it badly for their own actions.

Another sad feature is that one of her own sex takes such a decided stand—what a lack of natural sympathy.

We should hate the sin and avoid the result but never be so hard or be unable to extend a hand to help, however late.

A pretty face has its punishment, more especially if netted out by a man older, as Stanford White was.

MR. CRAWFORD.

"Mother Love."

I have been thinking about "Mother Love." I have been thinking of just what Mother Love really means. I was blessed with one of the best mothers in the world. I remember the great sacrifices she made for me. I recognize only that she was good and true. Evelyn Thaw is a mother. She has demonstrated, too, that she stands ready for any personal sacrifice in order that her darling may be properly reared. That boy in later years will certainly believe that his mother was worth saving. Who has the right to doubt him? Evelyn is worth saving.

EVA BERRY.

"Her Life a Failure."

I have read all of the letters published and while I do not believe with those who are defending Evelyn, I have been benefited by the able arguments they advanced for her. Now it appears to me that too much stress has been placed upon sentiment. That element should not enter into the discussion.

Of course Evelyn is worth saving and any person is, but I do not believe that her life is worth living. Certainly she cannot expect to enjoy the home of any good man because nobody would want her. And certainly her own sex, or those members who claim to be so good, will not receive her. This being true, what has she to gain by living? I believe her life has been a failure.

UNCLE SAM CONVICTS 603 AS 'SLAVERS'

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—The activities of the United States government under the Mann White Slave act have been as follows, according to figures just made public by Arthur B. Farwell of the Chicago Law and Order League, who got them from Stanley W. Clark, special commissioner for the United States Department of Justice:

Convictions 603
Acquittals 82
Pending 87

More than seventy-five defendants forfeited their bonds and fled from the country. The total jail and penitentiary sentences amount to 1,070 years, one month and nineteen days.

The figures cover the entire country, from June 25, 1910, when the United States Senate passed the bill, until August 31, 1913.

It is said that the number of prosecutions has decreased since Federal Judge Pollock of Kansas decided, late in September, that the Mann act was not intended to apply to the "personal escapades of men and women."

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Bad habits often make good plays. It was that way at the Majestic last night with "Bought and Paid For," which gave its stone-tossed audience three hours of enjoyment. As a matter of fact the season's run of the piece in New York and its wide endorsement is an entertainment of superior quality rather pointed the way to its virtues. You might have found them for yourself if you had been given a fair chance, but the returns were announced long before the arrival of Mr. Broadhurst's play.

"Bought and Paid For" was brisk entertainment—a mixture of the bitter and the sweet. It was sociological without being tedious, and amusing to a degree seldom discovered in plays with a serious story. Mr. Broadhurst struck boldly at a big problem in this play—a problem that doubtless hangs like a shadow over many homes—but the real bitterness of his heart-tragic love story was almost forgotten in the comedy he sprinkled so skilfully through his work.

There can be but little question that the author was striving for hard-fisted tear-stained drama, with a sobbing heroine and one big, sweeping scene. But the pen that was to do all this turned into a trail of such delicious and whole some good humor that the main point of the play was badly threatened several times.

But you did get your big scene, and Charles Richman and Kathleen Macdonell played it for all it was worth. Yes, had the cruel, heartless drunkard in his Fifth avenue mansion tearing things wide open with a thick voice and an unsteady step. The shrinking wife learned just how she stood in the home. She was simply the husband's property—he had bought and paid for her when he coaxed her from the hotel switchboard at $10 a week and turned her loose among automobiles, cut glass and private yachts. And having heard the truth, would she kiss him and be good? She would not.

That was where the drama broke out nobly, with the enraged husband smashing the door leading to his wife's chamber with a convenient andiron.

Mr. Richman was big and commanding as Robert Stafford. He was the strong man of the play with a conviction that left no doubt in the minds of the audience. There was both power and authority in his acting. Miss MacDonell was a sugar-coated wife, but still true to her womanly principles. Although leaning heavily toward harmoniousness she displayed sufficient strength to hold her own with the very masculine Mr. Richman. Her performance was pleasing.

And now for Frank Craven, upon whose shoulders fell the task of keeping things merry while the rough work was in progress. Mr. Craven was a joy to the tired ear—he was a positive tonic. You were compelled to feel the vitality of the play's big moment, but after two minutes with Mr. Craven's Jimmy you fairly hungered for his uncultured philosophy. He almost made the evening hilarious, which could never have been Mr. Broadhurst's original purpose. Mr. Craven was as human as he was laughable, and as brilliant in his characterization as anything you may expect to meet for many months.

"Bought and Paid For" gave you entertainment worth talking. It had genuine dramatic strength, a gripping story and comedy that was irresistible. And it was intelligently acted throughout.

Onset and Marion War Over Scallops

ONSET, Oct. 15.—Onset and Marion are involved in a hot little war over the scallop fisheries. It climaxed in the arrest of three Onset men—Captain Samuel Raymond, William E. Ellis and Alton E. Besse—upon charges of fishing in waters in the town of Marion.

Wareham has allied itself with Onset in the fight. One of the issues raised will be that none of the fishermen had taken more than a bushel of scallops—an amount any individual can take under State laws. Another issue is to what extent town governments can control the coast waters.

No! You would take the steak! The man who wants a sweet, cool, fragrant smoke, prefers plug tobacco to sliced or granulated tobacco, because plug tobacco has more flavor and fragrance.

The real tobacco flavor depends upon the natural moisture in the leaf. The only way to preserve all this flavor is to press the leaves into plug form and keep the moisture in by covering it with a natural leaf wrapper.

Tin cans, cloth bags or waxed paper packages do not keep in all the moisture of granulated tobacco. Some of the flavor departs when the moisture evaporates. The drier tobacco is the hotter it smokes—the more it bites your tongue.

With Master Workman Plug you can cut a fresh pipeful whenever you smoke and everytime will find it the freshest—sweetest—smoothest—coolest tobacco you ever stuffed into a pipe. Try it today and convince yourself. You'll say Master Workman makes a sweet pipe sweeter.

WOMAN IN CELL AS JURY VISITS HOME

ly mentioned, Mrs. Eaton shifted almost ceaselessly in her seat. She canted her head from side to side. She would look at the ceiling at her feet, at the jury, at William A. Morse, her counsel, at Chief Justice Aiken.

Finally, after placing the finger of a gloved hand in her mouth, and later resting the finger between her eyes, the accused woman leaned over with her left hand supporting her head.

Mrs. Eaton was in the courtroom twenty-five minutes. She arrived at 9:40 o'clock, when the proceedings were immediately begun. She wore the same black silk dress, same round black hat, the same veil and same gloves she had worn through the opening day of the trial.

Thanks Deputy for Kindness.

On entering the courtroom she thanked one of the deputies who drew back her chair while she seated herself.

The only spectators were one man and three women—one elderly and the other two younger. The only other women besides Mrs. Eaton in the room was a newspaper woman.

After the roll call of the jury Clerk Hobart rose. Not soon after that did Mrs. Eaton smile. Even that peculiar mechanical pose of her features which makes her seem to smile always, had been lost.

The indictment read by Clerk Hobart contains five counts. All were different descriptions of the same alleged act.

Mrs. Eaton's manner changed entirely during the reading of the document which accused her of slaying her husband, of "cunningly mixing white arsenic with tea and other drinks and, as alleged, secretly administering to him on divers occasions between January 4 and March 2" crimes he died.

The Indictment Is Read.

The jurors for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, on their oath present, that Jennie M. Eaton of Norwell, in the county of Plymouth, at Norwell, aforesaid, of her malice aforethought, contriving and intending Joseph G. Eaton, with poison, feloniously to kill and murder, did on the sixth day of March, in the year 1913, at certain places of white arsenic, the same being a deadly poison, with a certain quantity of tea, feloniously, wilfully and malice aforethought, mix and mingle, she, the said Jennie M. Eaton, of Norwell, knowing the said white arsenic to be a deadly poison, and on divers other times, between the sixth day of March aforesaid, and the eighth day of March, at Norwell, she, the said Jennie M. Eaton, certain quantities of white arsenic, the same being deadly poison, with certain quantities of water did wilfully, and with malice aforethought, did mix and mingle, said Jennie M. Eaton then and there, well knowing said white arsenic to be a deadly poison; and that the said Jennie M. Eaton on the sixth day of March and between the 6th day of March and the eighth day of March, at Norwell aforesaid, the poison aforesaid, so as aforesaid mixed and mingled, with the said tea, and with the said quantities of water, feloniously, wilfully and of her malice aforethought, did administer and cause and caused to be administered to him said Joseph G. Eaton, to take, drink and swallow down, into his body; and that said Joseph G. Eaton, not knowing the poison aforesaid, to the said tea, and in the said quantities of water to have been mixed, and mingled as aforesaid, said poison, so as aforesaid, mixed and mingled, by the said administering, and by the causing to be administered, to the said Jennie M. Eaton, to him, did take, drink and swallow down into his body, and thereupon said Joseph G. Eaton by the poison aforesaid so mixed and mingled, as aforesaid, by the said Jennie M. Eaton, and so taken, drunk and swallowed, down into his body as aforesaid, became then and there sick and distempered in his body; and the said Joseph G. Eaton of the poison aforesaid, and of the sickness and distemper in his body occasioned thereby from the said sixth day of March in the year aforesaid, until the eighth day of March in the year aforesaid, at Norwell aforesaid, did languish, and languishing, did live, on which said day of March in the year aforesaid, he, the said Joseph G. Eaton, of the poison aforesaid, and of the sickness and distemper of body thereby occasioned, at Norwell aforesaid, did die.

Seems to Regain Composure.

At the phrases "distemper" and "languishing" Mrs. Eaton would ovesshoulder drop her gaze to the floor.

But as one juror told District Attorney Barker rose to make his brief opening that Mrs. Eaton's composure returned. Her face flushed while he was telling the jurors of the Eaton home at Assinippi.

District Attorney Barker, who talked five minutes, said he wished the jury, when they reached the Eaton home, would take particular notice of the location of different rooms and doorways on the second landing of the house, and the relations of these rooms and halls together.

He said them that in going up the stairway they would come to one long hallway and into a smaller hallway from which a room led off on either side.

He requested them to pay particular attention to the front hall and the front door and the relation of the library to the front hallway. He added, too, for them to observe carefully the relation of the kitchen and the dining room. He concluded by emphasizing his desire that the jurymen return to the courtroom with the location of these different rooms and hallways and doors firmly fixed in their minds, that they might be aided by the evidence that was offered.

Although given the privilege by the court to explain what the defense might want the jury to see on the Eaton premises, the counsel for Mrs. Eaton declined.

Her attorney, William A. Morse, explained he would call the jury's attention to certain matters later and make no instructions in court.

Cautioned by the Court.

The jurors were cautioned by Judge Aiken not to listen to anybody or to converse with anybody other than one named for each side. The court stated that as the inspection would take the greater part of the day, he would not request the jurors to return to the court house, but would adjourn court until 9 o'clock tomorrow.

At 9:35 the jury filed from the courtroom. Mrs. Eaton followed a moment later and was driven back to the jail. The jury left Plymouth on a special electric car for Assinippi. They had dinner in Rockland.

Tomorrow District Attorney Barker will make the opening argument for the prosecution. He will be followed by Attorney Morse or Francis Geogan—perhaps by both—for Mrs. Eaton. The arguments concluded, the first witness will be placed on the stand.

Neither Dorothy Eaton nor Mrs. June Keyes, Mrs. Eaton's two daughters, appeared at the Plymouth courthouse today. It was understood they will be at the courthouse tomorrow.

All of the eighty or more witnesses summoned will appear at the courthouse tomorrow. It is expected that with the beginning of the testimony, throngs of curious and the sensation seekers will try to get into the courtroom, the seating capacity of which is but 150.

Appetite Ho! Ho! 'Tis a Great Joy

Appetite is very largely a series of signals from the stomach. When one has a normal appetite at the sight or smell of food the stomach through its connection with the mind of man is asked whether the food seen or smelled would be welcome.

The stomach if healthy says yes and at once our mouths water and we are hungry from desire—keenly, ravenously hungry. If the stomach be sick then we have no appetite and are actually nauseated.

Waiter—"How's your appetite today, sir."

Appetite makes the glands of the mouth open and saliva flows very freely—hence the term "Mouth Water." This is the first digestive juice. It has an important office to perform as all starchy foods are partially digested before it became one of its ingredients, ptyalin, is almost an instant digestive of starch. This process reduces the starch in foods to sugar.

The appetite causing a free flow of saliva aids the stomach by its ability to mix the food juices with mouth juices which enables it to more readily do its work.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into the mouth like food, are eaten, then dissolved and fluidized by the saliva. This mass then goes into the stomach and there quickly reinforces the stomach juices so that in a short time food is not adequate and man's appetite comes speedily back to him and he is hungry in a healthy, normal way.

By all means use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the very moment you feel a loss of hunger. The quick return of appetite to you will convince you quickly that your stomach has been, out of order and that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were the means of restoring its normally healthy condition.

Every druggist carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and no matter where you may be you can always obtain a box anywhere for 50 cents.

ANGELA MORGAN STUDIES MRS. EATON AT DEATH TRIAL

By ANGELA MORGAN.

A superficial study, an absolutely baffling feminine puzzle, a woman whose every light-hearted mother's body conceals the tragic woman beneath—is this to my estimate of Mrs. Jennie May Eaton facing trial for her life at Plymouth County Court House today.

After a day's close study of Admiral Eaton's widow, watching with keen interest and nevertheless the selecting of the twelve men who are to decide her fate, this is the vivid, inexplicable impression that stamps my mind.

There is something incredible in the graceful energetics, the smiling composure of this woman at so powerful a crisis in her life.

She takes her place in the court room with the happy unconcern of one attending a social function, or listening to a concert, or visiting a club meeting where interesting topics are under discussion.

Not once in her acts or motion or glance did Mrs. Eaton show she realized the seriousness of the proceedings. Not once did she betray that she knew she was a woman on trial for her life.

Tastefully gowned in black thoroughly groomed and self-possessed, her face flowering gently from the black veil, the widow of Rear Admiral Joseph Gilles Eaton was a pleasing picture for the eager eyes that pounced upon her the moment she entered the court room.

There was no mistaking the acute of the impression she made. Her personality was like an invigorating, delightful breeze and her smiles radiated to the uttermost corner of every heart.

Smiling, smiling!

Test was the supreme fact about Mrs. Eaton. She was radiant. How could it be?

Everyone asked the question of himself or his neighbor, silently, with puzzled eyes.

How could this woman sit in the presence of her fate, rosy and happy and interested in the proceedings as though they did not concern her?

It seemed like a scene in a play.

Vivid in Coloring.

Facing Judge Aiken, and with her back and profile to most of the talesmen, she presented a study in human characterization such as is seldom recorded in the annals of any court.

How does she look, what are the striking features of this remarkable woman, who stands as the cynosure of the nation's eyes?

Mrs. Jennie May Eaton has a full blown comeliness that breaks upon the beholder like sunrise.

As she sat in the gray court room, the rain lashing against the windows, the vividness of her coloring seemed almost to light up the place.

Mrs. Eaton has a complexion that any woman in the world might envy. So blossom-like it is, so fresh, so transparent—that it seems a continual index of her every changing surface emotions.

Flushing and paling, deepening from blush rose to peony red and back again to rose, this exquisite coloring of hers is easily the most striking of her characteristics.

Her eyes are her next best feature—brown eyes they are and large, like her daughter June's. Indeed, June Keyes resembles her mother with some that is unique. Her coloring, her manner, her personality, even the exact outline of the older woman's features.

Mrs. Eaton's mouth is true to its sensuous type in the index of an ample and glowing nature. The outward curve of the lips is a peculiarly unbroken one—there is almost a twist upward, so sudden is the curve.

Assumes Graceful Pose.

From the settling of her chair at last veil, this ample, bright countenance flashes warmth.

The first impression she made was of a wave of rose colored translucence and a flare of sound white teeth.

Then, as she took her place beside the lady, the glossy abundance of her hair, coiled in masses at the back of her head, showed through the veil.

She wore a black gown of soft material, carefully draped, a small black hat set at a becoming angle, black gloves, sensible looking black walking shoes and carried a black reading with deep silver clasps.

From time to time, as she leaned forward to talk to her attorney, William O. Morse, sitting near, she assumed an easy and graceful pose.

"Prisoner, look upon the juror. Juror, look upon the prisoner."

Again and again the command rang forth and each time Mrs. Eaton looked cheerfully into the face of the man who was destined to decide her fate.

Not a quiver, not a quake. Utter and perfect sweetness beamed from her eyes.

I have said that not once did this woman betray feelings of concern or deep emotion. There was an exception. That was when Judge Aiken, solemnly examining the first talesman, uttered the phrase: "And nothing prejudicial to this case."

But it was over in a few moments and she was leaning forward again talking with Attorney Morse graceful and smiling as ever.

CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well founded. Their tender little insides are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach; and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

DEMAND MRS. PANKHURST BE NOT HOUNDED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti gave out the following signed statement:

The report that the Bureau of Immigration or Department of Labor or any officer of either has decided or intimated that Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst will on her arrival at New York be held for examination by a board of experts in quiry at Ellis Island is without foundation. The bureau and the department have no power to refuse admission or rejection except on appeal.

At the ports the inspectors who first meet the incoming applicants are under the law and regulations independent of the Board of Inquiry as well as of the Commissioner of Immigration, in so far as holding applicants to appear before the Board of Inquiry is concerned, and in the manner the Board of Inquiry are independent of the Commissioner.

Mrs. Pankhurst will be treated respectfully, but just like any other applicant, and this is all an officer of the Bureau or Department can authoritatively assert.

The proposed detention of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst upon her arrival on the French liner La Provence, due on Friday, until a special board of inquiry can pass upon her case has aroused not only suffragists but all other women identified with public work.

Even those among the national enfranchists who oppose the militant movement, like the Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw, are in the proposed detention of the noted English militant an infamous affront which will bring in its wake a profound and sweeping sympathy from all quarters for Mrs. Pankhurst.

"I am opposed to militant methods, but not opposed to Mrs. Pankhurst personally," said Dr. Shaw, "and I do not know any law that can be enforced to hold Mrs. Pankhurst at Ellis Island. In fact, it would be a disgraceful act on the part of a government which allows Greek and Russian revolutionists into our country, to detain a woman who has been imprisoned for political offenses only."

Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, president of the Women's Political Union, spoke in similar strain.

$40,000 Painting Missing From Rome

ROME, Oct. 15.—Some tourists who visited the Cathedral of Santa Maria Maggiore at Spello discovered that Pinturicchio's painting of the Madonna in the Cappella del Sacramento, which is valued at $40,000, had been stolen and replaced by a copy. The police found that Prior Santarelli gave the original to the Marquis Bernadini, an art dealer. The police arrested the prior and the marquis. It is believed that the original of the painting has been smuggled to London.

Sawing Wood with Folded Hands—and Other Happenings

Governor Foss, today an avowed candidate for a fourth term, talks before the State Board of Trade at Norwood on the "New Auditing of Accounts" Speaking he will probably outline the issues of the campaign. He will discuss transportation problems.

Today the Governor's campaign pamphlet similar to the one he sent out to the voters two years ago is said to be ready for mailing. Everybody on the voting list of the state more than 600,000 persons will get one. In it the Governor will tell what he has accomplished in doing as Governor and what he expects to accomplish in the event of his re-election.

* * *

Mr. Gardiner, we understand is seeking information. He wants to know how to send an S. O. S. call by wireless, or telephone, or telegraph, or any other way.

* * *

Maybe some of the immigrants he's trying to bar out will keep their ears tuned to the wireless shelter on the way across, and give Mr. Gardiner the information.

* * *

Now if it was the old "C. Q. D." call, Mr. Gardiner could doubtless get along all right by just changing Q to O. As it is, the voters will have to insist on a "C. D. policy in the campaign troubles, and refuse to believe them till he delivers the goods.

* * *

Gessle is still talking of bird-lets and warbles, and Mr. Bird is endeavoring in vain to maintain a dignified silence, but Lieutenant Governor Walsh is putting in some hard licks of the real basics of the campaign, and the crowd that waited till half past eleven to hear him the other night was testimony that the issues are what the people want to hear discussed.

* * *

By the way, while Governor Foss was in Indianapolis, Mr. Walsh as Acting Governor had a chance to see how it feels.

* * *

As the old hymn goes: "Oh what a foretaste of joys dwelling."

* * *

Only of course, Mr. Walsh had no Republican Legislature getting jobs in his Gubernatorial shoe and so on chair.

* * *

Lieutenant Governor Walsh, in his campaign speeches, has a way of reminding the voters that some of the planks Gardner and Bird are now lustily expounding have been good Democratic doctrine for years. This little habit is extremely discomforting to Gessle and Mr. Bird.

* * *

As the campaign issues shape, one of two things become more apparent:

1. That Gardner and Herfield are having a trying time in their attempt to stay mad at each other.

2. That Mr. Bird is obviously devoting his time to Mr. Gardner, so that the Governorship is lost sight of in his fight to down the G. O. P.

3. That Mr. Walsh seems to be the only candidate who realizes that railroad control and the sanctity of platform promises are a lot more important to Massachusetts voters than matters which can only be decided by the National Legislature.

* * *

Many wise political prophets are predicting that five years from now will see national parties entirely eliminated from local politics.

But think how terrible it would be if Gessle had to quit being "the candidate of Lincoln's great and glorious party," and had to begin standing on his own feet.

* * *

One of Lieutenant Governor Walsh's most popular issues is his plea for a non-partisan primary. Such a primary is the only step that will throw the Riley band picking methods into the scrap heap. Mr. Walsh is fortunate in having Mr. Barry as a running mate on this issue.

* * *

"The other fellows are fighting each other so hard," says Walsh, "that all I have to do is to fold my hands and saw wood."

* * *

Mr. Walsh meant well, but it's a darned hard job to saw wood with your hands folded. Ever try it?

* * *

* * *

Candidate Bird's daughter was a Progressive State delegate and Theodore Roosevelt's sister is making campaign speeches in New York, but they haven't the vote yet.

* * *

"Dr. Anna Shaw Not To Speak" headlines a contemporary. Unbelievable! There never was a woman who wouldn't talk.

* * *

"A queer character in my home town got married. The town wit heard the news, and remonstrated:

"'Well, I don't know who he married—but I know he done well.'

If Tom Riley gets any appointment he don't care what it is, he'll do mighty well.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

SLEEP-DISTURBING BLADDER WEAKNESS BACKACHE-RHEUMATISM, QUICKLY VANISH

Even Most Chronic Sufferers Find Relief From Few Doses of Croxone

Croxone soon relieves such conditions, because it reaches the very roots of the disease. It sinks right into the stopped-up, inactive kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the little filtering cells and glands; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid substances that lodge in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism; heals the inflamed membranes of the bladder, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped-up, lifeless kidneys so they can filter and sift all the poisons from the blood, and drive it out of the system.

So sure, so positive, so quick and lasting are the results obtained from the use of Croxone, that three doses a day for a few days are often all that is required to end the worst backache, regulate the most annoying bladder disorders and overcome the numerous other similar conditions.

Croxone is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it without results.

An original package costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone fails to give desired results, regardless of how old you are, how long you have suffered, or what else has failed.

PASSENGERS' TALES OF DISASTER CONFLICTING

SURVIVORS TELL OF DOZEN PLUNGED INTO FLAMES WHEN BRIDGE FELL

A. E. Stricker of No. 144 Wilmington avenue, Dorchester, a mechanical engineer, tells a stirring story of the great sea tragedy to which 136 persons lost their lives in mid-ocean, when the steamer, Volturno burned and sank.

Stricker and Mrs. Stricker were passengers on the rescue liner Minneapolis, which brought thirty Volturno survivors into Tilbury, Eng. Through his knowledge of Russian and German, he conversed with the immigrants, and has their positive testimony that the fire started by the overflowing of grease in the cook's galley.

In his story, cabled to the AMERICAN today, he says:

"I cannot vouch for the truth of the statements by the men with whom I talked, but I do not think they are lying, as each upholds the others' story. Three who spoke German told me the fire started in the galley of the Volturno where at times there were the cook and two immigrant passengers.

"It seems that the cook was frying something in grease and spilled the inflammable liquid on a fire. There followed a flash of flame and some smoke. Nothing more was ever heard of the unfortunate men in the galley. So rapidly did the flames spread they were unable to escape through the blinding smoke and fierce heat.

"They were caught like rats in a trap. They burned to death almost immediately. An attempt to stop the flames was futile. The immigrants were driven like cattle on to the forward deck of the vessel, where they stood wild with terror, shrieking in the cutting gale, huddled in a mass. They were never permitted after that to re-enter the quarters below to obtain valuables or sufficient clothing to keep out the bitter cold.

Saved Copy of Talmud.

"I recall only one survivor who, throughout the time aboard the Minneapolis, had anything except the clothes on his back. He was a Jew who had saved a copy of the Talmud from the wreck and came up over the side of the Minneapolis hugging the treasured volume to his breast. The rest of the men saved absolutely nothing. Destitute, poor, unkempt wretches were clothed for the most part in filthy rags. Their condition was pitiful to behold.

"After the officers of the Volturno knew it was impossible to control the fire an attempt was made to lower a boat filled with women and children. This occurred about 8 a. m. Thursday. Men say the boat was utterly rotten, and split in the middle long before it neared water. The writhing mass of human freight was hurled into the raging sea and drowned at the vessel's side.

Rotten Lifeboats.

"Subsequently two more boats were lowered without passengers and each, though it had only its own weight to support, also split while in midair owing to the rottenness of construction.

"I understand reports by wireless tell that no lives were lost by boating. This is not so, according to survivors on the Minneapolis, who say that at midnight on Thursday the bridge of the Volturno fell prey to the flames and without warning gave away, bearing to an awful death in the fierce fiery pit the ship's officer and a dozen or more passengers who had sought refuge there to escape the heated decks."

The differing stories of survivors as to the number of explosions on board the Volturno are reminiscent of the testimony of officers and seamen on the U. S. S. Maine, after she was blown up in Havana harbor, when reliable men, although in the same part of the battleship, disagreed as to the number of explosions which rent the vessel.

DESCRIBE HOW ROTTEN LIFEBOATS SPLIT IN TWO IN MID-AIR

Grosser Kuerfuerst two miles away to show that a boat could live in the water.

Lloyd's Own Story.

Lloyd said:

On Thursday morning about 7 o'clock an explosion occurred in the forward hold. We have since come to the conclusion that it took place among the cargo, part of which consisted of chemicals.

Fire immediately followed. We rang the fire bell and gave the alarm and officers were sent to rout out the immigrants, for the blaze was rapidly spreading toward the quarters occupied by them.

Some of the steerage passengers were already up, but many of them rushed on deck without taking time to dress. I never knew a fire to spread so quickly.

By 8:20 o'clock the flames were shooting from forty to fifty feet in the air. Captain Sifton gave instructions to the wireless operator to send out the "S. O. S."

At that time all the available seamen were fighting the fire. Stokers, engineers, stewards, galley hands, and in fact every person employed on the ship were in the fire brigade.

I must say this for the crew, these men worked with a will. They knew that their own safety depended upon their exertions.

Ship Pitched Terribly.

At times the ship pitched so that the firemen had to be tied to the woodwork, to keep from being washed overboard. Every hose and standpipe was in action. We literally filled hatch No. 1 with water.

But in spite of all we could do the fire gained. The decks grew so hot we could hardly bear to stand upon them.

There was a great deal of excitement, and even now when I try to look back on the real events of the day I cannot remember all of them. I don't even know how many boats were launched, but I do know that some of them were burned.

Between 9 and 10 o'clock the flames had gained to such an extent that the captain gave orders to launch one of the boats. It was swung over the side, but smashed against the side of the ship. We were pitching so in the heavy seas that it was practically an impossibility to swing a boat from the davits.

Second Attempt Futile.

A second attempt followed, but this, likewise, ended with disaster. I don't know how many were in the boats, but I am told that they were all men. I was busy with the fire-fighting brigade and trying to calm the fears of steerage passengers.

SURVIVORS AT NEW YORK PRAISE WOMEN'S HEROISM

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—A story of calmness and heroism on the part of women seldom equalled in the history of the world was brought to port here today by the Grosser Kuerfuerst when she arrived with 105 survivors from the burned Uranium liner Volturno. The courage of the women in the face of death on a burning ship in a gale at sea was in marked contrast with the cowardice of the men who made up the crew.

Although ship officers pleaded with the women to jump into the sea so they could be picked up by the small boats sent out by the rescue fleet, they refused to leave the burning ship. The terror-stricken men needed no urging to jump. With cries of fright they leaped into the water and after they had scrambled into lifeboat, the others had to draw off, thus halting the work of rescue.

All the survivors on the North German Lloyd liner were men. Eighty-three of them were passengers, the remaining twenty-two were members of the crew.

As the liner with the refugees on board steamed up the bay to her pier she was noisily hailed by all the craft in the harbor.

At daybreak crowds of relatives and friends of Volturno survivors began gathering about the North German Lloyd pier.

Saved Twenty-One from Sea.

Second Officer R. Bremer, who was in charge of the first lifeboat that put out from the Grosse Kuerfuerst in the storm to take off the passengers of the Volturno, told how twenty-one persons were picked up from the sea.

He told how Captain Francis Inch of the Volturno had ordered Second Officer Lloyd and four seamen of the Volturno's crew to put off in a small boat to prove to the liners which had begun to range around the burning ship Tuesday night that it was possible for lifeboats to reach the Volturno. These two men were among those brought in on the Grosse Kuerfuerst.

It was related how Third Officer Von Sonneberg of the North German Lloyder, with a crew of men, fought their way for five hours in a lifeboat half full of water, until they were under the stern of the Volturno.

Eleven Leap Overboard.

Eleven men leaped overboard and were picked up. Von Sonneberg called to the women to jump into the water, saying they would be saved, but there was no response. On the afterdeck of the burning vessel Third Officer Duesselmann was imploring the women to jump overboard.

"You will be safe in lifeboats, for the boats are waiting to pick you up," explained the ship officer. "We will stay with our children," was the response from many of them. Others and brothers or sisters from whom they would not part, and the officers would allow only one person to jump at a time so that the danger of drifting away from the lifeboats would be lessened.

Grosser Kuerfuerst arrived at her pier at 12:30 o'clock, having taken more than two hours to make the trip from quarantine. The cabin passengers were disembarked first and the refugees were held until the last.

Immigration officials who had boarded the liner at quarantine questioned the Volturno survivors, getting their names and addresses.

Second Officer Edward Lloyd of the Volturno, who with Captain Inch shared the heroism honors of the disaster, told a grapple story of how, after the rescue fleet had been implored for hours Thursday afternoon to send out lifeboats, he and four sailors got into the remaining lifeboat on the Volturno and rowed through the storm and darkness to the liner.

NAME JURY TO CONSIDER FUNK "CONSPIRACY"

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—The examination of prospective jurymen was continued today for the trials of Attorney Daniel Donahoe and Detective Isaac Steifel, charged with conspiring to defame Clarence S. Funk, former general manager of the International Harvester Company.

The names of former United States Senator William Lorimer and Edward Hines, millionaire lumber merchant, will play a part in the trial.

Donahoe and Steifel are charged with having conspired to induce John C. Henning, a bellboy, to sue Funk for $25,000, charging the alienation of Mrs. Henning's affections. The alienation suit brought after Funk had testified that Hines had told him "it cost $100,000 to put Lorimer over," was dismissed. It is expected to take several days before a jury will be completed.

MANY BANQUETS FOR MAYOR OF CHINATOWN

In anticipation of Yee Wah's departure today for China, the Chinese district was the scene of many banquets and festive observances. A play by the Chinese Merchants' Association was followed by numerous events, each organization trying to outdo the other to make the farewell to their "Mayor" a memorable occasion.

Chinese merchants from as far away as New York came to attend the celebration and none without bringing presents.

The banquet menu included duck, chicken, pigeon, shore meat, rice and Chinese vegetables. A dinner in Yee Wah's restaurant followed, with more speaking and American cheers mixed in.

Hundreds of Chinese from all over New England climbed the long flight of iron steps to shake hands with the departing "Mayor."

Jail Delivery Plot Foiled by Trusty

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Oct. 15.—A jail delivery in the Hudson County jail was frustrated within an hour of the time set by the finding of loaded revolvers in the cells of two prisoners and five steel saws hidden in a bathroom. Warden Sullivan was told of the plot by a trusty.

SELIGMAN AND WIFE PART, BUT BAN COURT SUIT

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Attorney Jefferson Seligman, head of the banking house of J. & W. Seligman and son-in-law of Isador Wormser, have parted, it became known here today, but the separation is not final. The two have been married seven years.

Mr. Seligman said early that as he is not suing for divorce, he does not want to make public the cause of the trouble. He did not care to discuss the proposition.

Mrs. Seligman said it was true that she and her husband had separated, but added that the cause of the trouble in the case. It is just a mere matter of incompatibility of temperament between a husband and wife," that is the best way to describe it.

Mr. and Mrs. Seligman have not met since early in the year when Mr. Seligman left for Europe. Serious differences of opinion had arisen prior to that time, and when he returned the town house was in charge of caretakers and Mrs. Seligman and her mother were at Deal Beach. Through intermediaries it was agreed that Mr. Seligman would not visit the Jersey home nor interfere in any way with his wife.

As the only daughter of Isador Wormser, Mrs. Seligman inherited approximately $2,000,000 at his death seven years ago. Since then the estate has trebled in value.

Pastor Declares Mormonism Menace

The Rev. Frank W. Collier of the First Church, Temple street, speaking before the National Reform Convention in the Park Street Church, declared the Mormon hierarchy was a menace to the nation. He said polygamy could not be eradicated except through an amendment of the Federal Constitution.

Mary Young At Her Auto-Piano

THE Autopiano is a thoroughly high-grade artistic piano, made by expert piano labor, of the best materials that can be used in the process of piano building. The cases are highly artistic and beautifully designed; the tone is all that can be desired by even the most critical. And into this same splendid and artistic piano is built the player mechanism, so skillfully constructed that it is entirely concealed when the piano is closed or used for hand playing.

STADIUM WORK FOR HARVARD'S SQUAD TODAY

By SYDE LYNES.

HARVARD football adherents are considering reverting to the good old Grecian dare when each particular element was defined and in case that element showed a disposition to appear too frequently and for stretches that seemed too long, it was immediately opined that said deity was peeved at something and everything possible was done to placate his or her noble wrath. Certain it is, that if libations are offered to any one deity by the Harvard "fans" this year, Jupiter Pluvius will come in for 99 per cent. of the offerings. He has made a mess of things at Cambridge, and students of mythology are now hard at work trying to find out how his royal deity has been offended.

TO PRACTICE IN STADIUM.

THE Harvard eleven will be hard at work in the Stadium today, weather permitting, and a strenuous fight with the official mourners of things football at Cambridge (the scribes) will be on hand to be buffeted and tossed about by the Crimson warriors heavy and hold. If old Sol refuses to smile upon the proceedings and gives place to that gloomy Gus better known as deluge, the warriors will have a nice quiet little session in the baseball cage where they may breathe in finely sifted dirt at their leisure.

TURF IN POOR CONDITION.

THE keeper of the grounds at Soldiers Field, who ought to be an authority on grass and turf conditions, particularly as his name is Dennis, makes the statement that the turf in the Stadium won't be worth a rap for the rest of the season, as a result of the vile weather that has been prevalent for the past two weeks. He says he can't remember any such continuous dampness and he will have his hands full trying to get the turf into shape for the Yale game. In order to hold secret practice the team has to be in the Stadium each day, and this helps to mess the ground up, when the weather is wet. The last two games have been played in mud and the natural result is that the field resembles a first-class cow pasture in a swamp. One would think that Jupiter Pluvius would use a little more discretion than Mort.

INJURED MEN BACK IN TOGS.

COWEN, the guard who has been out for a couple of weeks with an injury Dana, the end, who has been nursing a tender elbow; Froedler, who as we related in a piece of touching poetry, was kicked on the bun last week, and Willetin, who has been on the side lines for some time with a slight fracture of the foot, have all returned to hard work and may now be looked to do their share in upholding the Crimson glory. All of them are shipshape and fit for any kind of scrap that may fall to their lot. Cowen will have his hands full in regaining the left guard berth, which Mills has been filling in very creditable fashion since the beginning of the season, but Cowen will now have a little space of time in which to have things all his own way, as Mills is out of the play for a little while with a muscle bruise. It is nothing serious, but muscle bruises frequently take a good deal longer to heal than the amount of pain, etc., would seem to warrant.

BRICKLEY RESTING UP.

BRICKLEY is still out of the work with his injured hip, but after the X-ray examination of it had disclosed no chips off the bone the coaches are content to give him a little rest. He is on the side lines daily, but not in togs. Coolidge is still a little fine, and he will be given lighter work for a few days to give him a chance to come back. He certainly does look over well, and it would be well to let him rest on his oars for a bit. The others are in good condition and getting into proper trim as to weight. Pennock is still tipping the scales at 200, but he will lose eight or nine pounds after a couple of games.

TEAM SHOWS SNAPPY WORK.

THE work in the baseball cage was pretty strenuous, and the light scrimmage which took place was plenty to get the men perspiring pretty freely. It was good to put their feet on dry ground after the duck-like existence they have been leading for such a long time, and the varsity responded to it with pretty snappy work all around.

Ross Wins Bout from Miller on a Foul

By JACK CONWAY.

CHARLEY MILLER, the big Californian is today clamoring for another bout with one Tony Ross, who spends the greater part of his time in the vicinity of Newcastle, Pa. Miller and Ross fought at the Atlas A. A. last evening, and in the third round Maffit Flaherty was so cruel as to send Miller to his corner and gave Ross the decision on a foul.

Miller does not believe he did anything that was not in accordance with the rules drawn up by the late Marquis of Queensbury, whom, we are told, was a jolly old soul.

The Coast heavyweight asserted after the battle that he started a left hook for Ross' midsection, and that Tony jumped into the air and as a consequence the blow landed low. Miller declared that it was Ross' duty to conduct himself in the ring in such a manner that legitimate punches would not land below the belt. Far be it from us to enter into a controversy with two such stalwart "hopes."

The contest was interesting as far as it went. Ross had the best of the fighting in the first two rounds, but Miller began to show well in the third session, and we believe that the "go" would probably have been a slashing affair if it had not been for the low blow delivered.

Miller is a big, powerful fellow, but is still very crude. In the first two stanzas Ross scored several stiff punches. He appeared to be too clever and experienced for the burly Coast giant.

ROSS TO BATTLE SMITH.

ROSS has been matched to clash with "Gunboat" Smith, white heavyweight champion of the world, at the Atlas Club next week. Smith is one of the most sensational fighters in the business. He is not a classy boxer, but is a sweet puncher. His famous righthand wallop usually brings home the bacon.

Ross is confident that he will give Smith a rugged battle. Ross is not a champion, but has had a wealth of experience within the squared enclosure and is fairly clever.

MARTIN AND DE ZUCCA DRAW

THE semi-final bout was between Terry Martin of Philadelphia and Patsy De Lucca of this city. It was declared a draw by the referee. Martin gave a good exhibition for a boxer who was supposed to be all in. Harry Hall was billed to meet Martin, but was forced to call off the "go" on account of illness.

Martin outboxed De Lucca and landed the cleaner blows. He had a slight advantage in the humble opinion of the writer, but a draw was as good a decision.

Charley Sheppard defeated Victor Flories in a six-round preliminary. Johnny O'Brien of Roxbury was scheduled to meet Teddy Murphy in another six-round "go," but O'Brien refused to fight, as he declared that his manager was not with him and so could not second him.

BOUT IN PROVIDENCE.

THE boxing lid will be lifted in Rhode Island tonight when "Kid" Alberts clashes with Frank Loughrey in a fifteen-round contest at the Marieville A. C. The men will weigh in at 142 pounds ringside.

Alberts is one of the best performers in the welterweight division, and Leo Flynn, his manager, did not waste any time in claiming the welterweight championship of the world, after Alberts had defeated Phil Cross in New York.

Yes, dear reader, Leo is one fine little press agent. He is in the same class with Dan Morgan when it comes to running a typewriter. I believe Morgan has a record of 138 words a minute, while Flynn has set up a mark of 157 words a minute while blindfolded.

It is therefore obvious that Leo might be able to beat Danny's mark if he went to the mountains and trained hard for a few weeks.

There will be three six-round preliminaries. They will be as follows: "Young" Ketchell vs. "Young" Arcuss, "Young" Brown vs. "Young" O'Neil, and "Young" Terry Martin vs. unknown.

Plan Crusade for a Longer Draft Period

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—The Three I League may lead a crusade of Class B organizations to obtain a five-day extension of the draft period. Discussion of the question took place informally at the league's annual meeting, and later, it was said, a resolution suggesting such a change to the National Association of Minor Leagues might be passed.

Blossom Injures Forearm.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 15.—Captain "Jack" Blossom of the Yale nine has fractured a small bone in his forearm. He was hit by a pitched ball during practice. It is not believed, however, that the injury will prevent his playing in the Spring.

Await Sanction of the Harvard A. A.

If the sanction of the Harvard athletic committee can be obtained, the University cross-country team will compete in a dual race with the Boston A. A. over the new Belmont course in the course of two weeks. Coach Shrubb would especially like to have a brush with the Back Bay boys as a sort of tryout for the first big grind of the season, the race with Cornell over the home course, November 1.

An effort was made to land the Colby team for a run, but the Maine college wanted the Crimson to perform at Waterville. Yale will be engaged at New Haven on November 8. The freshmen of both institutions will meet in a run there also on that date. The final run of the season will be the Intercollegiates, which will be staged this Fall over the Columbia University course in New York. Coach Shrubb is planning on again capturing the big title. He only college he fears is Pennsylvania, where Dr. George W. Orton, a veteran cross-country runner, is in charge of this season.

Conference Plans East vs. West Game

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 15.—The Western Conference universities are already beginning to talk up an intersectional football conference after the end of the gridiron season in the West and the East. The Westerners purpose to formulate petitions to the various universities, asking that consideration be given to the proposal to have the Eastern university championship team meet the winner of the Western Conference, whether the Western winner be Chicago, Wisconsin or Minnesota.

The Westerners are not content with working in the West; they are working out their fraternities in the East to have Harvard, Yale and Princeton students and alumni take up the proposal also.

Taber Leads Cornell in Dashing Style

ITHACA, Oct. 15.—Shorty Taber, who played halfback on the Cornell team last year but who has been kept out of the work for the major part of the season to date, was the star of the first scrimmage of the week when he replaced Barrett at quarterback on the varsity. His handling of the team and quick dashes through the line show that he is coming back in great shape.

Dartmouth Coaches Bolster Up Defence

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 15.—Dartmouth coaches and players alike realize the strength of the Williams team and all efforts are being directed to repair the leaks in the defence. Whitney and Dunbar are back in the lineup.

Both will probably be able to play part of the Williams game. Moreover, they are sadly needed as two out of three teams that Dartmouth has played this season have scored on the Green, and these men strengthen materially the defence.

Twenty-six Share in Athletics' Spoils

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—Twenty-six checks have been distributed here by Wm. B. Bruce, secretary of the National Baseball Commission, to the officials and players of the Philadelphia American league club as their share of the world's series money.

The club received a check of $69,853.79 of which $10,000 has been put up as a bond to comply with the rules of the game. This was the net amount after only five per cent. had been deducted from the total which will be turned over to President Johnson of the American League for the use of the war-saved American League players. Each of the twenty-five players eligible to compete in the series received $3,194.

The sixth game of the 45 class match between Willard Toomey at the Elite Manor and Defeated Corwin, 150 to 142. Toomey Porter will play Malo.

MITCHELL'S SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

A DISPATCH from St. Louis says that Robert Lee Hedges, owner of the American League club there, has promised his players that he will reject all offers to sell the club for the next ten years. The dispatch further says the players, in return, promised the "usual loyalty."

Just what occasioned these declarations by the club owner and his players does not appear on the surface. They read like the proceedings of a mutual admiration society. Is Mr. Hedges proud of his ball club and are his players proud of the man that has hired the men who have so consistently kept the Browns in last place for so many years?

WHAT do the St. Louis fans think of it all? Two tail-end clubs in St. Louis is not an unusual thing, but from the indications of the season's attendances the fans are at last tired of it. Neither the Cards nor the Browns drew a corporal's guard after the first few weeks of the season had passed, and the fans saw that it was to be the same old story.

Mr. Hedges is not over-popular with his fellow-magnates in the American League. There is also a sneaking suspicion, but President Ban Johnson does not care much for Mr. Hedges and would like to see the St. Louis American League club in other hands. Doubtless Mr. Johnson will be relieved to death when he reads that Mr. Hedges will not secure for at least ten years.

THE affairs of the National League club in St. Louis are no better off than those of the American League club. The "woman ownership" has not proved popular with St. Louis fans. The club under Huggins has accomplished nothing. After a fair start it slipped back in last place and finish. The season there. Huggins has nearly a championship ball club under him, but he cannot whip the players into line. His recent row with a close friend of his, Manager Hal Chase, Manager Baker, Magee and Sallee. These are all first class ball players. Some of the fans thinks Magee would become a second Ty Cobb under different conditions than those prevailing at St. Louis.

HOW would Mrs. Britton, who owns the St. Louis Nationals, like to swap her entire club except Manager Huggins, for the entire Boston Nationals, Manager George Stallings? If he is level Stallings would make the trade when the invitation, in spite of the fact that the Cards finished last and the Pirates finished fifth in the National League race. What the Cards need is a proper directing force. It is hard to accurately believe that Huggins is not the proper man to give the floundering fans also present the members of such a Rogers Hornsby was fired by Mrs. Britton a year ago.

PRESIDENT GAFFNEY of the Boston Nationals will be in Boston next week for a social meeting of the Boston club in Steve Wrens away and see the last games of the year on the home grounds. Something must be done. What a

IT is good nothing to be said until the end of the season with the wonders of the Boston baseball team. Members of the fandom were aware of the recent world's championship for baseball, but the final play was played. Hurray say all cry and no excuses to offer.

WHILE the World's Series was on there was considerable talk among the gatherings at the hotels at night on the subject of President Johnson of the National League and the baseball writers. In public the writers of baseball praised Johnson for his fair and square deal in the world's series, but in private they said as follows:

Unless all signs fail, a dandy fight will be staged this Winter when the National League meets to elect its president for the season of 1914. Differences have developed at the meeting of last year, and the cold days come and the club owners have had a chance to ponder second thought.

But it must be confessed the outlook is dark for Mr. Lynch. Nature at present, and, indeed, all nations are taking through their respective bars. It looks very much as if it will be a case of "Lynch" by a close for a second term as president of Dreyfuss.

"There is a rumor about that Lynch will be the victim of a frame-up by the Dreyfuss forces, but necessary to make a showing. I can't see it. Lynch has made mistakes, but they are simply bad and I am of the opinion that he should not be too severely censured for them.

"The whole question is one of business with baseball magnates. Lynch has not been a success for he has not made money for the club owners. Under his administration baseball has not been a success. Lynch has failed down in the Pittsburgh deal. He has failed in the Cincinnati deal. He has failed in the Brooklyn deal. He has failed in the Philadelphia deal. He has failed in the Boston deal. He has failed in the Chicago deal. He has failed in the St. Louis deal. He has failed in the New York deal. He has failed in the Washington deal. He has failed in the Cleveland deal. He has failed in the Detroit deal. He has failed in the Boston deal. He has failed in the Chicago deal. He has failed in the St. Louis deal. He has failed in the New York deal. He has failed in the Washington deal. He has failed in the Cleveland deal. He has failed in the Detroit deal.

Pickwick Ale on tap

"Mornin' Sammy!" said Mr. Weller.

The son walked up to the pot of Ale, and, nodding significantly to his parent, took a long draught by way of reply.

"Wery good power o' suction, Sammy," said Mr. Weller the elder, looking into the pot, when his first born had set it down half empty. "You'd ha' made an uncommon fine oyster, Sammy, if you'd been born in that station o' life."

There's a fascination about Ale drinking. The bitter hop flavor of Pickwick Ale acts as a tonic to the tired system, while its delicious flavor makes you wonder why all people do not drink it both as a beverage and strength giver.

Disease Germs in Butter Not Killed by Cold

Boston is supposed to have one of the best milk supplies in the country. Through inspection by the city Board of Health dairies have been kept up to a high standard in other States. But how disease will creep in from the milk supply is evidenced by the recent outbreak of typhoid fever in Charlestown.

How much attention is given to our butter supply. Yet butter is as much a carrier of disease as milk. Mr. Cassidy tells today why the butter supply needs as rigid inspection as the milk supply.

William F. Kirk Tells About:

Little Bobbie's Pa

A look we to a clam bake once. It was the first clam bake that I had ever went to, & I aint going again until my stummick gits bigger. I ate too much so did Pa.

Ma told me that we had to hurry to git to the clam bake, because she grate trubbel with them affairs was that there was never enuff to eat to go around. There is always a few glut-tons to clam bakes that eat as much as six men, Pa sed, & they are usually the first ones there. The last clam bake that I went to, sed Pa, I got there a little lait, & all there was left for me to eat when I got there was a few cold potatoes & four cold clams. All the nice chicken & lobster was gone, sed Pa. Hurry, Bobbie.

I walked as fast as I cud go & we we got there we had a lot of time. The bake basket started at all, & there was only about twenty men there & one other little boy besides me. His name wa Willie Garrison & he was glaid with his father.

Are you going to eet lots? I asked him.

I am going to eet almost as much as my father, but not quite, sed Willie. My father's name is George, & he can eat more than any man in the country.

A BIG WAGER.

I bet he can't eat any more than my father, said Willie. Wait till you see him eat.

So I went and told my Pa what Willie Garrison sed & wen the clam bake began Pa started to eat and Mister Garrison started to eat too. I seen rite away that Pa wasent in it with Mr. Garrison, but I knew that Pa wuddent quit. Wen there was nothing left but the bones, we counted up and this is what Pa ate:

7 chickings.
12 ears of corn.
15 sweet potatoes.
100 clams
Sum extras.

& this is what Mister Garrisin ate:
10 lobsters.
10 chickings.
18 ears of corn.
14 sweet potatoes.
20 Irish potatoes.
170 clams.
Sum extras.

Pa ate one moar sweet potato than Mister Garrison, but that was because Willie's father didn't like sweet potatoes at all & jest ate a few to keep Pa company.

PA WAS SILENT

I cuddent git pa to say a word on the way hoam. He wuddent talk about anything. I sed it was a nice afternoon, & all he did was to nod his hed. Ma cuddent git him to say a word, either, but I guess ma was kind of glad that for once pa had calm hoam full of thirst food. He was sick for three (3) days, but ma dident shold him onst. She jest called him der dear old stuffed quiet.

Seeking a Husband

By CONSTANCE CLARKE

"O DICK, you darling!" I exclaimed, involuntarily, as my arms closed around the American Beauties, and just a week ago I had sworn to give him up forever. Then I saw a tiny note swinging from one of the flowers, and I pounced upon it eagerly. Go to the races—how wonderful. I'd love to, and then I remembered the Dick of last week and hesitated. Only for a minute, however, for the fumight of the races drove everything else out of my head. And so, of course, I agreed to go.

"Well, he said, in quite an agreeable manner, "of course you're going to put up a little something today, aren't you? I can give you some pretty good tips, it you like."

I hesitated, partly because I had no idea how much Dick would put down as a little something, and, partly because I hated to appear ignorant. And then I said, "I don't think I want to venture anything, really, I won't enjoy myself half so much if I do."

"Nonsense," said Dick, in a matter-of-fact way, "you'll enjoy yourself a lot more. Buck up, Peggy, and have a little sporting blood. I'll teach you how to weather your misfortunes like a true sport. Come, what's it going to be continued, "I happen to have had a few lucide tips about this new horse, Sultan, and can win safely put up a hundred on him. Think of how proud you'll be when you go home with it doubled."

We were late, and by the time we were settled in our places, the first race had been called. I began to be quite excited and Dick seemed to know a great deal about everything.

"I put up a couple of hundred on Sultan," he said carelessly. "You'll be quite a wealthy girl when we go home tonight. See that gray mare over there, that's Tom Holbrook's Lady Betty, and that Irish horse Cerise is said to be quite a winner. I have something up on him."

But I hardly heard a thing he said, for my head was swimming—a couple of hundred, and I couldn't really afford twenty-five. However, I clenched my cold fingers tight and kept my eyes glued upon Sultan. Sultan must win.

The first race ended in a storm of excitement, and as Sultan was entered in the second race with Lady Betty and the big Irish horse, I was waiting with all my heart for him. As the time came to go, I leaped to my feet and strained my eyes over the course. Lady Betty was leading, followed closely by Sultan, and Cerise was lumbering along in the rear. Then Sultan gained and raced neck and neck with Lady Betty, and my hopes flew high. But slowly and surely Cerise came to the front. Easily, without a bit of effort, he forged ahead and passed the other two, there was a storm of applause, and I was left in a daze with an empty feeling in my heart.

Dick's turned to me excitedly. "Gee, that Cerise is a wonder, isn't he? I won a cool thousand on him. Too bad about your ten hundred, Peggy, but you needn't hurry about paying it, you know."

That was the last straw, but I'm thankful to say that I carried it off as if nothing had happened.

"I'll send you a check tomorrow," I laughed, gayly; but that was the end of Dick. It ended our friendship then and there. As for a husband—I guess I must look further. My heart isn't broken anyway.

Do You Know That—

A man at Flushing, N. J., who was ordered to pay alimony on the basis of his salary, asked his employer to reduce his pay in order that he might get the better of his wife.

Norway's population is the smallest in Europe, compared with her area. Each of her inhabitants could have forty acres of land, while the British have to be content with less than an acre.

Tall men are not numerous? It has been found that only one man in 208 is over six feet in height.

Count von Saylchensky, a Polish landowner, lost $8,000,000 in money, besides real estate worth $55,000, during a single night's play at cards at Pesth.

Herr Kokoscha, the well-know Viennese painter, has broken off his engagement with Frau Alma Mahler, a widow, because she possesses an income of $10,000 a year from her late husband.

It has often puzzled the unlitiated to give a reason why musicians tune their instruments to public, and not before they enter the orchestra, if they tuned their instruments before entering the theatre or concert room the temperature would be so different in the place of performance, and therefore the instruments would not be in tune.

The record day's bag of grouse for a single gun was made by the present Lord Walsingham, who killed 1,070 birds in a little over fourteen hours. He used 1,550 cartridges, including forty signal shots and dred birds. During the performance he killed three birds at one shot and three times he killed two at one shot.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Easily and Cheap: Made at Home, Saves You $2.

This plan makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually conquers an ordinary cough in 24 hours. It is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent quieting effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchial asthma.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pine is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat and membranes. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

The prompt results from this mixture have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

People Notice It. Drive Them Off With Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The box is sold on the guarantee that after you have taken the tablets a few nights, the pimples on your face, neck and arms will leave with Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are the successful substitute for calomel—there's never any sickness or pain after taking them.

SHE

GONE are the Spring and the Summer, from the year;
And our lives as well. May we not, dear,
In our October find serene delights
To take the place of ardent Summer nights?
Not striving to retain a dying season,
Or imitate its pleasures, but with reason
Accepting Autumn's quiet, briefer day
Of calm content, not seeking to be gay?

HE

GONE are the Spring and Summer; yet behold
The radiant woods, supreme in red and gold
And russet colors; and the wind harp plays
A louder song than in the April days.
Our lives need not be colorless or sober
Because of Autumn. Emulate October,
Who will not let the ailing years grow dull,
But keeps its love by being beautiful.

The Witching Hour

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

TOTALITY has occurred. The first of the word totality was written at the instant of the beginning of the total phase of the eclipse of the sun, as observed from the observatory the morning of the auspicious day, September 15, 1913, the apparent annihilation, the cutting out of space of the resplendent moon standing over the distant Pacific ocean, was a most impressive scene, from up here amid a hundred silent sentinel peaks, early in the morning.

The time shown by the mean solar clock, regulated to standard international time of the 120th meridian west of Greenwich, was four hours, one minute A. M. At the same absolute instant of mean solar time the master solar clock in Greenwich was reading 00 hours 1 minute, or one minute past noon, as shown by the minute hand of the great clock really belonging to the entire world. And one minute past noon there is the same as four hours, one minute A.M., or along our good 120th meridian in California, the beautiful; or the eighth great hour circle, at one-third of the distance around the earth and likewise around the celestial sphere, starting from the world's first meridian as revealed by the focus of the world's adored transit telescope over in Britishland.

For the eyes of men are focused, as it were, on this tiny fibre in high power lenses.

The magnitude of the eclipse was 1.435; that is, the diameter of the earth's shadow where the moon passed through it was 430 thousands greater than the diameter of the moon. Then we had an eclipse of long duration. And it was indeed impressive to see how much larger the earth is than the moon; for even with the telescope, the curvature of the shadow across the moon was much greater than the curvature of the moon's shore near dred birds. During the performance he killed three birds at one shot and three times he killed two at one shot.

The people in Washington, D. C., and in Baltimore and Philadelphia, could not see the eclipse, as at time of beginning the moon was setting below their distant Western horizons. When the objectglasses were turned toward the moon, of course, the opposite or eye-end was pointing through the globe of the earth toward the sun. A bright line drawn through the centre of the earth from the centre of the sun to the centre of the moon, is the line of eclipse data. But the surface of the earth is, on an average, 3,963 miles from the centre; the diameter the moon, as seen from the earth, is 32 minutes of arc; and of the earth, as seen from the moon, 101 minutes of arc; a number that must be allowed for in computing the time and points of view, as seen from many places on earth. The ephemeris giving all computations was published in Washington four years ago, and every one was fulfilled to the letter. For great is the power of mathematical minds.

Up-to-Date Jokes

President Woodrow Wilson has a very quick wit. A man in the course of an animated conversation, noticing that Mr. Wilson's eyeglasses were perched near the tip of his nose, remarked:

"Your glasses, Governor, are almost in your mouth."

"That's all right," was the quick response; "I want to see what I'm talking about."

At a fashionable dinner party, after the ladies returned to the drawing room, the hostess, in a very decollete dress and wearing magnificent jewels, leaned back in her chair and shivered slightly. A footman went in search of the lady's maid.

"Parker," said the lady, with languid magnificence, "I feel chilly; bring me another diamond necklace."

At a dinner party an officer of the Guards was placed with his back to the fire. He stood the heat for some time, but at last was obliged to ask for a fire-screen. His host, a pompous old squire, who thought everything belonging to him was perfection, got exceedingly out of temper at the fire being complained of, and said:

"But not at his back, sir," was the witty response.

BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

With simple, safe, home-made tonic. Get from any druggist 8 ounces of Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavona de Composee and ¼ drachm Menthol Crystals. If you like, add 1 drachm of your favorite perfume. Mix thoroughly; apply night and morning with fingers; for dandruff and falling hair. Contains no dye or coloring matter, but the ingredient, according to a well-known chemist, acts directly upon the dormant pigment-forming cells and thereby restores gradually gray hair to its natural color. This same ingredient is also a powerful stimulant to the growth of new hair.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHY NOT RECIPROCATE?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My friend and I are members of a social club of which each fellow (except my friend and I) has a lady friend. In order to enjoy ourselves we must encroach upon the hospitality of the ladies present. Of course we do not like to do this and we wish to resign from the club against the wishes of the other members. Do you think we are doing right in resigning?

FRANK.

IF you are in debt socially to these ladies, you must not resign. On the contrary, you must remain in the club until at least you have had your turn at entertaining. It would be a very disgusting thing to do, especially for you and your friend to give a theatre party to all of the ladies in a bunch.

ASK PERMISSION TO CALL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and deeply interested in a girl one year my junior. I have known her from childhood up. I am in a quandary. I would like to call and see her at times, but never have made a practice of doing so, for the simple reason that our acquaintance was somewhat abruptly halted upon our leaving school.

ANXIOUS.

THERE is only one way. Write a note asking permission to call. If she retains an interest in you, and you prove agreeable, it will not be difficult to re-establish the friendship of your childhood.

YOU MUST FORGET HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a young man for about one year, and he has told me he loves me. This young man when he was out with me last promised to call and failed to do so. I love this young man dearly, but would like to know how I can win his love entirely.

I know he goes out with other young ladies, and when with me he calls me all pet names. Can you help me out in this matter, as I am wild about him?

FIRELEAD.

I AM afraid he has been flirting with you. The fact that he calls you pet names signifies nothing. If he really loved you, he wouldn't care to go with other girls and he would not neglect an appointment with you. He deserves all the earmarks of a flirt, and, believe me, my dear, a girl is the gainer by being such an admirer.

WHAT IF IT IS "NEVER!"

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-three years old and have been acquainted with a young man for some time. Whenever he leaves me he promises to write and let me know when he will be able to see me again, but seldom keeps his promise. When I telephone him and ask him reasons for not writing me, he says he has been very busy, but makes no engagement with me then. Am I acting wisely in calling him up, or would it be better to wait for him to write? I ask for if I should receive word from him it would be months—perhaps never. However, he always appears glad to hear from me whenever I telephone him.

DOROTHY.

IF YOU would be wiser if you showed a just wrath at his repeated failures to keep his engagements, instead of an anxiety to make further engagements with him. The next time he disappoints you make no overtures. What if it is never? "Never" may be the best ending of an acquaintanceship so unpromising.

RESINOL HEALS ITCHING ECZEMA

Completely Cured When Three Years of Other Treatments Did No Good.

June 14, 1912.—"Four years ago I developed a bad case of eczema on my face which was not only bad to look at, but extremely annoying by reason of burning and itching. It was in very large scales, looked almost like boils.

"As soon as the disease healed a trifle in one place—always leaving the skin dark—it appeared in another, getting worse as it advanced. After three years of treatment it grew so bad until I found Resinol. I used both Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and after two months of perfect use of the eczema remained." (Signed) Miss Beulah Amanda Elliott, Greenwood, Del.

Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are also speedily effective in even the stubbornest cases of pimples, blackheads, dandruff, sores and piles. Prescribed by doctors for 17 years, and sold by every druggist in the United States. For free trial, write to Dept. 10-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

How Thin People Can Put On Flesh

A New Discovery

This mom and woman—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night contained all of the fat-producing nourishment it contained! You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain fact is you can hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nerves are starved for the functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Dig out the foolish facts and funny methods about this. Omit the fresh cream nonsense. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of those 3 delightful tablets. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, active flesh is the average increase. Nature's aims to charge your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh, new red blood corpuscles—to give the blood the carrying power to deliver to the starved nerves the strength-making food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood to easily assimilate form. Thin people tell how they gained all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and say the results last years. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the most vital fat-producing elements known to chemistry. They come in tablets in a package, are pleasant, harmless and non-secret, and all druggists are then subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Sister's Faithless Sweetheart

Answering the Complaint of a Girl That She Is Being Made Love to by Her Sister's Fiance

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SISTER'S beau comes to see you twice a week and whenever he gets a chance he tries to make love to you, does he?

And once he gave you a box of candy, and once he sent you two matinee tickets, and didn't say one word to sister about it, and he told you you were pretty and said he liked blue eyes and yours are blue, and what must you do about it. He's awfully good looking and too lively for sister, you think?

Are you sure sister's beau really does try to make love to you, or are you one of the girls who thinks every man who says a courteous word to her or pays her a little compliment is to love with her?

Where's sister's beau from?

The South.

They say all kinds of things down there to every girl they meet and don't mean a word of them.

They would be horrified to be taken seriously—their own girls are used to them and don't take them. This may be what is the trouble with sister's beau.

He may be trying to get you to like him so you'll say a good word for him to sister. Some men are just that foolish. Little sister and—are you sure you don't do some flirting, too?

What do you say when he tries to make love to you—what if he did say you were pretty—maybe you are—why shouldn't he tell you so—and the blue eyes remark, what is there so serious in that, do tell?

It's a probably said that to every blue eyed girl he's seen for years.

Think it all over little sister, think it over carefully—and if you really believe the man is trying to make real love to you, there's just one thing to do—walk right into the room when he is visiting sister, and tell her all about it right before him.

That will give them both an equal chance—and of course you would never let your own sister marry a heartless flirt if you could help it.

That's all—just what he said, and what he did, and tell it so he can hear —and then you've done your duty, and sister will have to do hers as she sees it.

Two lively fat sister, is he—how do you know he is?

Lively men like quiet women, and lively women like quiet men, didn't you know that, little sister—and what affair is it of yours, anyway, as long as sister and sister's beau are satisfied and happy?

You probably don't know half so much about your sister as you think you do or about your sister's beau either—so be very careful what you decide and what you plan when it involves other people's affairs.

Of course, you owe your sister a duty, and, of course, you should pay that obligation—if the man is really what you think he is. If he is you don't want anything to do with him, do you?

If he's deceitful to sister he'll be deceitful to you. Oh, so, you are an wonderful exception, you're going to be the regular rule, little sister, blue eyes and lively disposition and all. Oh, so you're the dear exception you're going to be, you're not built on the same lines that most girls are built on, but you're different, you're unique, you're charming and fascinating and you're going to be the one girl in a million.

Don't deceive yourself one minute or let him deceive you—or sister, either, for that matter. Think it all over carefully and do what you would want sister to do for you in your own case.

And listen—don't believe all that a man says or tells you you are pretty for he doesn't expect you to—you know —and if you do it is as awkward not only for him—but for you—don't you see, little sister?

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

IF a woman doesn't keep anything else during her troubled passage through life she is quite satisfied if she has kept her figure.

With everything, hair and teeth going out, and nothing coming in, there is still joy left if she has her figure.

"Your left hip," dressmakers told Daysey Mayme again. "Is larger than your right. Your right shoulder is lower than your left. Your arms are too short for your height. Your neck and waist measurements are out of proportion."

It is despair of ever being able to lop off or add to to make herself suit her dressmaker, Daysey Mayme ventured one day in a store where they sell ready-made and found the peace there that passeth all understanding.

She found a pretty dollar gray and a twenty-dollar blue.

"You look well in both," said the salesgirl, "but better in the gray. The style is just fitted to show off your perfect figure."

Daysey Mayme had intended spending only $12 for a dress, but the clerks convinced her that she owed something better to her perfect figure, and also bought the ninety-dollar garment.

Moral: If you are a woman, and tired and discouraged in trying to lop off and add to, forget it and buy such garments and patronize those who sell the ready-to-fits.

There you will learn that when it comes to shape you have all those Greek beauties beaten to a frazzle and hairdressers done to a face-you-well.

The salesladies who sell these garments will tell you so, and they ought to know!

WILSON DID GET $10,000 FROM RYAN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Oscar W. Underwood's charge that Thomas Fortune Ryan contributed $10,000 to the campaign fund of President Wilson when he ran for Governor of New Jersey, made on the floor of the House Monday, does not appear in the Congressional Record today. It was expunged by the Democratic floor leader after he had been told by the White House Mr. Wilson had received nothing from Mr. Ryan.

It can be said on the highest authority, however, that Mr. Underwood made the statement on information that came to him directly from persons so close to the multimillionaire Wall street man that Mr. Underwood was justified in placing the greatest faith in its reliability and made the statement in his reply to the charges of Representative Hobson of Alabama with a full belief in its truth.

Notwithstanding the denial issued from the White House, the AMERICAN has learned from one of the most chiefly instrumental in bringing about the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for Governor of New Jersey that Thomas Fortune Ryan did contribute $10,000 to the Wilson gubernatorial campaign.

Colonel George Harvey, according to this newspaper informant, sought and obtained the contribution.

From the same source it was also learned that James Smith, Jr., formerly United States Senator from New Jersey, who, at the time of Mr. Wilson's nomination for Governor was the undisputed "boss" of the Democratic party in his State, gave $75,000 to elect Dr. Wilson Governor.

Over the long distance telephone, James Smith, Jr., banker and life insurance in Elberon, N. J., was asked if Mr. Ryan had contributed $10,000 to the Wilson gubernatorial campaign.

"I would respectfully refer you to Colonel George Harvey," he answered.

When a reporter for the AMERICAN called Mr. Harvey's residence at Deal, N. J., on the telephone a man who answered said:

"This Is Colonel Harvey speaking."

Questioned as to whether Mr. Ryan did or did not give $10,000 to the Wilson gubernatorial fund, he answered:

"I am Colonel Harvey's secretary. Colonel Harvey is out dinning with friends and will not return until after midnight."

President Wilson's break with Senator Smith over the New Jersey senatorial contest in 1911 when Martine was elected, led to the overthrow of Smith as the State leader.

LATEST FROM TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were stronger at the beginning of trading and in this market the improvement in tone was maintained throughout the first hour. New Haven made a good gain at the opening, but soon reacted and at the end of that period was down ¼. It was active. Hoosac Tun & Maine showed a small gain, however. United Fruit had advanced a point and American Telephone was up a fraction. Mines were stronger, Granby advancing 1, Alaska Gold ¼, Butte & Superior ¾ and Calumet & Arizona ½.

The New York market weakened towards 11 o'clock and Canadian Pacific ragged again, declining 1¾, while Union Pacific, Reading, American Can and American Smelting sold fractionally lower. Amalgamated was higher and Steel unchanged. International Harvester was a weak issue, receding 1¾.

New York Market Opened Higher.

The range of prices was higher in the New York market and during the first few minutes of trading the gains were close to a point. Although a number receded after making gains, the early tone remained strong and the strength was not lost because of approval of its debenture issue by the Massachusetts Public Service Commission, which was nearly two points higher. Among other stocks to advance around a point were Amalgamated, Union Pacific and Steel. Canadian Pacific quickly recovered from a decline.

Irregularity prevailed on the curb.

Americans were unsteady in London but ruled above parity. That market is very seriously affected by the tightening of money and rumors that the Bank of England may make a further advance in its minimum discount rate. The trade outlook is also unsettled in the United Kingdom and it is generally believed there that the foreign trade boom has reached its zenith, even with American markets more accessible under a new tariff.

President and Free Tolls.

It is stated at Washington that when Congress convenes for the regular session President Wilson will recommend the appeal of the free tolls provision of the Panama Canal act. Under the act American coastwise vessels in the coastwise trade will have free use of the canal. That is opposed by railroad and other interests in Canada who do not wish to have freights between the West and East coasts of North America and Europe pass up the American bottoms. Canadians are planning to build up a great coastwise trade themselves. They have taken a long step in that direction already in the way of West Indies commerce.

Canadians are aided and abetted in the fight for the repeal by interests in this country which opposed digging the canal. First and foremost among the latter are transcontinental roads. The latter would have to cut rates still further to compete on long hauls with American ships plying between Pacific and Atlantic ports of this country if the vessels went through the canal without paying tolls.

Statements about sentiment in Congress and the President's views are as follows:

"It has been made clear to the President that if he sends in the recommendation it will stir up a large sized row in both Houses.

"Charges that the transcontinental lines of both the United States and Canada are behind the repeal movement will increase the bitterness with which it will be fought.

"The White House has intimated that the President has not made up his mind positively about the repeal. Nevertheless, among those close to him it is understood such is his desire.

Congress Still for Free Tolls.

"The sentiment for free tolls in both Houses is strong. Some of the most influential Democrats on both House and Senate are for free tolls, and if there is any effort at repeal the debate will be hot. It is doubtful whether binding caucus action to repeal the free tolls can be obtained either in House or Senate, and especially in the Senate, where many Democratic members are becoming less plastic in the hands of the administration than they have been hitherto.

"Senate sentiment on the subject was pretty clearly shown early in the Summer, when the Canal Committee refused to consider the food bill for repeal and put the whole subject over to the regular session. This action was almost unanimous on the part of the committee.

"Senator Gorman of New York is chairman of the Canal Committee of the Senate. He is strong for free tolls and may be relied on to fight any effort at repeal. He will be a large factor in the situation.

"Another strong advocate of free tolls is Congressman Samuel W. McCall, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Committee. He will be in a position to assert much influence against repeal.

"Another phase of the situation is the fact that free tolls are very popular in those sections of the country where there is extreme interest in the opening of the canal, but many in the land that trade will be quickened.

"The South is also stirred over the canal opening, according to John Barrett, who has been touring Southern cities and making speeches on the subject, and the Pacific Coast cities are alive to it. From these sections more than seven nearly two points higher. Among other stocks to advance around a point were Amalgamated, Union Pacific and Steel. Canadian Pacific quickly recovered from a decline.

Demands Florida Bar All Japanese

Representative Clark Hears Bryan's Cousin Has Colonization Scheme.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Representative Frank Clark of Florida has sent a letter to Governor Park Trammell of his State demanding that the Governor call an extraordinary session of the Legislature to pass a law similar to the one just passed by the Legislature of California preventing Japanese from owning land.

Mr. Clark was very much exercised over a report that William S. Jennings, formerly Governor of Florida and a cousin of William J. Bryan, was promoting a colonization scheme which has for its object the cultivation of rice by Japanese. According to reports that have reached Mr. Clark a party of Japanese had already reached Florida for the purpose of buying out farms.

What a Woman Can Do —IN—

FLORIDA

MESSRS. BRYANT & GREENWOOD,
Kimball Bldg., Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen: In order to inspect my farm ask me about the number of trees and the different kinds of fruit grown by me, beside numerous other products, the remarkable amount of profit per acre from the most part, that I thought you would be interested in a little statement from me which you could use in your business. Also, I will give you information that they could also bring to their friends in the North and show how a woman can make a small tract of farm pay. I live only 10 miles from Tampa, which is a city of 50,000 and is the largest city in Florida, and I am not going to brag about being alone, but I do know that I am doing all that, not some money in the bank for a rainy day.

I have only three acres in grapefruit, seven of tangerines and oranges together than they are usually planted, and there are on these trees and one-half acres the following trees:

304 grapefruit,	18 orange,	28 mangoes,	12 avocado pear,
15 seedless,	3 mulberry,	3 guava,	2 lime,
1 loquat,	3 Japanese,	1 sour sop,
and on the edge of the grove, acting as a windbreak, about 300 guava trees.

On the farm are 16 cocoanut trees, beside other shade trees and foliage plants, with quite a little bunch of banana plants thrown in.

Last year I shipped 2,020 boxes of grapefruit and sold off the farm direct over 1,000 boxes. This fruit ranged in price from $2.00 to $6.00 per box, the most of it being very fancy seedless fruit.

This season I have already picked 10 boxes each, some of the heaviest yields being as high as 4 boxes from a single tree, while the younger fruit trees ran as low as 5 or 6 boxes. My grove is young and just coming into its prime, trees ranging from 7 to 9 years in age.

I raised all the garden truck we needed for family use and fodder for 5 head of live stock, besides the regular crop of corn, and I have one acre of sweet potatoes, which will yield from 800 to 1,000 bushels, and we are expecting to market about 500 bushels, in connection with chickens.

With the orders both at my front doorstep and the cars and milk that we have on the place, our living is using up the necessary work of preparing the soil.

My ten acres are not all under cultivation, but the income from it is larger than any 160 acres of land I ever saw in the North, and I have lived the last four in Northern farm and will be glad to say for the farm, and to those who are looking for a home in Florida.

I have the reputation of being a hard worker and I do the work to make a success, but anyone can live for 12 months in Florida.

Very sincerely,
(Signed) MRS. R. W. HERSHBERGER.

The Steeple, Moving Like the Hand of a Clock

It Is a Finger of Stone, Built by Man to Point Everlastingly Toward Infinite Power

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

If you live in the suburbs you devote perhaps two hours each day to travel. Two hours per day means practically one-fifth of your active life.

How many readers make any use of those two hours, and feel each day that they have been well spent?

Instead of being wasted, those hours should be among your best. Never mind if you are clinging to a strap because companies are licensed to exploit you. Never mind if you are tired and weary when the day is ended. The tired brain often thinks better than the fresh one. And man, so recently descended from the monkey who had to think while hanging head down, ought to have no trouble thinking as he hangs from his strap—head up.

Some in the cars play cards as they travel homeward. Others talk gossip, and tens of thousands waste too much time on this and other newspapers.

Try this experiment: Make up your mind to devote your hours of travel to thinking. The brain, like the muscles, needs definite and well planned exercise. It must be methodical and regular. There is no limit to its possible results. You would be glad to spend your two traveling hours in a gymnasium on wheels. Make of your homeward car a mental gymnasium. Each night or morning take up some one line of thought and follow it to its end—or as far as your mind can take you. Learn to observe, to study, to reflect. Don't look at your fellow passengers as calves look at each other on the way to the slaughter house.

Look, as a human being, at other human beings. There they sit or stand or hang. Some chatter, others scowl, fret, fume, complain, brag, grin or otherwise express the strange emotions that move us here.

They are all ghosts, as Carlyle tells you, imprisoned for a time in coverings of flesh, and a car packed full of real ghosts passing over the earth on their quick journey to the grave ought to stir you.

The giggling shopgirls whose life of misery is still a joke to them—blessed youth!—should interest you deeply. And the negro, too, with a tired black face, resting for the next day's slavery—slavery on a wage basis, but slavery all the same. Possibly you despise his thick lips. But those lips are carved on every sphinx in Egypt's sand, and if you could go back far enough you would find the ancestors of that negro, before the days of the Pharaohs, laying the foundations of your religion and locating the stars in heaven. At that time your forebears were gibbering cave savages, sharpening bones and gnawing raw flesh. When you see the negro on the opposite seat, the ill-starred one who has gone down in the human race while we have gone up, think about him, study him, speculate as to his ultimate end—and your own. Don't merely say to yourself, "That's a plain negro," and go on chewing gum.

The train rumbles over the switches, and in the dusk a swinging lantern tells you that a man is at work, guiding you safely when your work is done. Can't you take an interest in that human atom, representing the Power that swings our tiny sun in space, lighting us on our journey toward the constellation Hercules?

A black steeple is outlined against the dark-blue sky of the evening. That is a finger of stone, built by man to point everlastingly toward Infinite Power. It now points "upward." In twelve hours—as the earth slowly turns—it will be pointing "downward." But there is no upward or downward in the carpentry of the universe. In the twenty-four hours, as it turns round with the earth, that steeple points toward all the corner of space, and constantly it points toward Eternal Wisdom and Justice in every corner.

This is tiresome? All right, then we'll stop. But whether we tire or interest you, remember:

As a man thinks, so he grows. Think, study, use all the hours that separate your croupy cradle from your gloomy grave. Those hours are few.

Give Mrs. Pankhurst a Generous Welcome

Mrs. Pankhurst should receive a hearty welcome in the United States. She is coming here as an able woman, a willing martyr to a great cause. She is coming here to explain the necessities of militancy in England, as we understand it, and not to advocate militancy in the United States. Mrs. Pankhurst is a woman of good sense and good judgment enough NOT to advocate militant methods in this country.

Here we are getting universal suffrage and recognition of women's rights through argument. But here the women are appealing to American men and not to Englishmen. They are appealing to intelligence and not to prejudice. They are succeeding in getting their rights and getting equal suffrage all over this Union. Soon they will get it in Massachusetts, and they will get it through the logic of the situation and not through resort to force.

It would not be well or reasonable for the women of England, who have failed to get suffrage, to advocate force or militancy to the women of America who have succeeded in getting suffrage without such methods.

We do not think that Mrs. Pankhurst has any such intention, and she should be accorded a generous reception by all American men, as well as women, who honor courage and self-sacrifice and appreciate ability.

CINDERS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

It is night and it is raining;
All alone you bow your head
With a memory too complaining
And a heart that seems like lead.
Each brown leaf that goes a-flying,
Torn forever from its bower,
Haunts you with its hopeless dying
Like the ghost of some glad hour.

Now, away from mirth that hinders
Every thought suggesting tears,
You are gazing at the cinders
Of a dozen burnt out years;
For we broke from every tether
In the cities where we strayed,
And the wine we drank together
Made us children unafraid.

Love extravagant and burning
Was our one and only creed;
Down the lane that knows no turning
We were whirled at madman speed.
Charred reminders of dead pleasure
In the lotus-days of old,
Each poor cinder is a treasure
That I would not trade for gold.

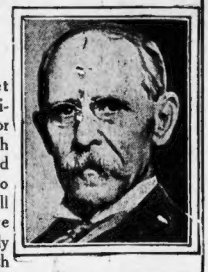
THE FAVORITE

By MINNA IRVING

O LOBSTERS in your scarlet coats,
And terrapin retire,
And juicy crabs give up your place
Above the kitchen fire,
Frogs' legs and ducks, go hence and seek
Refrigerators' chill,
And lordly salmon can your airs,
My taste for you is nil.

You chicken a la Maryland,
Beloved by epicures,
And sirloin smothered in mushrooms,
The pantry shelf for yours,
And luscious Little Necks remain
Within your ocean cloister;
He's back upon our board again,
The dear, delicious oyster.

WONDERS OF THE PLANET JUPITER.



He Is the "Comet Catcher" of the Universe—Were It Not for the Sun, Our Earth Would Revolve Around Jupiter—So Fast Do Big Planet and All Satellites Move That His Day Is Only Ten Hours in Length

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

IF you look toward the south in the early evening you will see the planet Jupiter glowing placidly among the constellations, like a great super-star which has no need to twinkle in order to call attention to itself.

You will understand at a glance why the ancients gave to this magnificent planet the name of the chief of their gods, why the Chinese called it the "Regulator" and the Egyptians "Horus, the Guider of the Sphere."

In our scientific way we have found more accurately descriptive terms for this big planet, which exceeds the earth about 1,300 times in magnitude. Among other things, we call Jupiter the "Comet Catcher."

Its power of attraction is so great (more than 300 times that of the earth) and its position in the solar system is so commanding (about five times as far from the sun as the earth is), that it often draws wandering comets out of their paths as they approach the sun from outer space and turns them into smaller, shorter orbits, so that, henceforth, they are unable to go very far away, but continue to revolve around the sun in elliptical curves, whose form has been imposed by the interference of Jupiter.

Nearly thirty comets are now known which have thus been "captured" by Jupiter.

He is not powerful enough to keep them for himself, but is compelled to hand them over to the sun. He is like one of the great feudal barons of the Middle Ages, who had to surrender his prisoners to his lord, the king. Still, he sometimes interferes with them a second time, if they venture near him, and sends them scurrying off in new orbits.

He has also created havoc among the orbits of the hundreds of little planets, called "asteroids," which he has trained into groups, and we is even suspected of having turned some of them into his own retainers, in the character of little "moons."

In fact, Jupiter is so powerful that he would make the earth revolve around him if the sun were absent. One of his four principal moons is larger than the planet Mercury, and yet he swings it around him once every week, making it travel in that space of time more than 4,000,000 miles. The nearest of them, which is considerably larger than our moon, is whipped around him at a speed of 40,000 miles per hour.

Everything goes fast about Jupiter. He turns on his own axis so rapidly that his day is only ten hours long, and if we were situated on his equator we should find ourselves whirled round at the rate of more than 27,000 miles per hour.

One consequence of this is that he has flattened his own poles and swelled out his own equator by centrifugal force to such an extent that he measures about 5,000 miles less through the poles than through the equator. His equatorial diameter is about 88,000 miles, and his polar diameter only about 83,000 miles.

This difference is so striking that you can see it easily if you look at Jupiter through a telescope. He is not round like a baseball, but elongated like a football, or, rather, flattened like a pumpkin. Another consequence of his mad energy of motion, which you will see if you inspect him with a telescope, is that his whole surface is covered with parallel belts of clouds drawn out into bands by the swift rotation. These clouds vary in color and in form, and while you are watching them you will actually see the planet turning, if you continue your observations for an hour or two.

Another thing of fascinating interest which a telescopic view of Jupiter affords is the motion of the four nearby moons. It was Galileo's discovery of these moons that upset the ancient system of astronomy. They seem to fly as if terrified at the possibility of being drawn into the grasp of their relentless master. In the course of a single evening you can see them cross his disk or pass into and out of his shadow; and often you can watch their own little round shadows, as black as ink drops, moving swiftly across his broad, oval, shining face or disk.

If you have not yet studied astronomy—a subject that every intelligent human being should know something about—begin at once with the planet Jupiter. If you cannot get a chance to look at him with a telescope, watch him with the naked eye, observe his place among the stars—he is now in the constellation Sagittarius—and see how that place slowly changes from week to week. Then get a book on astronomy, and learn from it all you can, not only about Jupiter, but about other things in the sky, and the result, in the broadening of your mind and the tranquillizing of your spirit, will be both a delight and a surprise to you.

THE LAW

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE sun may be clouded, yet ever the sun
Will sweep on its course till the cycle is run.
And when into chaos the systems are hurled,
Again shall the Builder reshape a new world.

Your path may be clouded, uncertain your goal;
Move on, for the orbit is fixed for your soul.
And though it may lead into darkness of night,
The torch of the Builder shall give it new light.

You were, and you will be; know this while you are:
Your spirit has traveled both long and afar.
It came from the Source, to the Source it returns;
The spark that was lighted eternally burns.

It slept in the jewel, it leaped in the wave;
It roamed in the forest, it rose from the grave;
It took on strange garbs for long eons of years,
And now in the soul of yourself it appears.

From body to body your spirit speeds on;
It seeks a new form when the old one is gone;
And the form that it finds is the fabric you wrought
On the loom of the mind, with the fibre of thought.

As dew is drawn upward in rain to descend,
Your thoughts drift away and in destiny blend.
You cannot escape them; or petty, or great,
Or evil, or noble, they fashion your fate.

Somewhere on some planet, sometime and somehow,
Your life will reflect all the thoughts of your now.
The law is unerring; no blood can atone;
The structure you rear you must live in alone.

From cycle to cycle, through time and through space,
Your lives with your longings will ever keep pace.
And all that you ask for, and all you desire,
Must come at your bidding, as flames out of fire.

You are your own devil, you are your own god,
You fashioned the paths that your footsteps have trod.
And no one can save you from error or sin
Until you shall hark to the spirit within.

Once list to that voice and all tumult is done;
Your life is the life of the Infinite One;
In the hurrying race you are conscious of pause,
With love for the Purpose, and love for the Cause.
